TEACHING EXPERIENCE AND EVALUATIONS

I have been a teaching assistant every year while in the Economics PhD program at UC Santa Barbara. I would be delighted to teach courses in microeconomics and labor economics, and I am capable of teaching any other economics course with adequate time for preparation.

I have experience teaching a variety of courses listed in the table below. During the Spring quarter of 2014, I was the head Teaching Assistant for Introductory Macroeconomics, taught by the Economics Department Chair, Professor Peter Rupert. I also received the best teaching assistant of the quarter for my work as a head TA in the Spring quarter of 2014. I was asked to return as head TA for Introductory Macroeconomics in 2015.

Below is a table listing the courses for which I have been a teaching assistant at UC Santa Barbara. The table also lists the mean score of teaching evaluations from students in my course section. The evaluations are provided by UC Santa Barbara's Evaluation System for Courses Instruction (ESCI) at the end of every quarter. Numerical scores correspond to the following: (1) Excellent, (2) Very good, (3) Good, (4) Fair, (5) Poor.
