

green light GO!
RESPECT THE SIGNALS

- Guy: Let's be real
- Girl: Let's be real
- Guy2: When you hit on the drunkest girl at the party
- Girl2: When I have to watch my drink
- Guy: When you tell her it's just regret
- Girl: When you didn't believe me
- Guy2: Why is this the norm?
- Gir2l: Why is this what we say?
- Guy2: ...and think?
- Girl and Guy: Why is this okay?
- Girl: It's time we talked honestly about this
- Guy: So this week, when you see someone wearing the stoplight button, it means they are willing to talk... honestly...about consent and about the culture and attitudes on campus that allow assault and abuse to happen
- Girl: You'll also see posters hanging up with questions to encourage conversations
- Guy3: Like "Why is "I was drunk" an excuse?"
- Girl3: And "Why'd you assume it was a yes?"

Guy: And then join us on Saturday, as we break the Guinness World Record and raise awareness around the issue of consent with the world's largest game of Red Light, Green Light

Girl: You know -- Green means go. Red means stop.

Guy2: But what about yellow? What does that mean? All the stuff in between. The hesitations. The pauses. The times we should really stop and check in with each other.

Girl: Let's start the conversation. Let's change the culture.

Guy3: Let's get real

All: Let's get real

Guy: To learn more, go to zbt.org/greenlightgo