

LAND OF THE GIANTS

One Hour Documentary

Join Lin Sutherland as she journeys to Tasmania, Australia's small southern island in search of the world's tallest and largest trees. Unfortunately Lin is not alone in her search for these legendary giants...it's a race against time and against a giant of another kind — the massive and relentless wood chipping industry. These forests and their self-supporting ecosystem are dependent on growth, decay and renewal for survival which is constantly being threatened by logging, mining and cattle grazing. The journey leads into some of the most remote areas of wilderness to encounter these impressive giants. Along the way, the amazing wildlife and beauty of the oldest rainforest on Earth is truly breathtaking.

The tallest tree is decreed to be a redwood towering 367.5 feet, in California but Lin is certain that here in Tasmania other giants may topple this record. Land of the Giants captures Tasmania's most rugged, remote and awe inspiring wilderness areas, unmatched in beauty anywhere in the world. If the legendary Tasmanian Tiger still lives it is in this wilderness that it will be found. This is not only a great adventure story but also one that bears witness to the environmental concerns facing rainforests all over the world.
