Los Angeles, CA (January 24, 2012) Buxton, who Esquire.com recently called one of “2012 Artists to Watch,” are hitting the road in support of their New West Records debut album Nothing Here Seems Strange (January 31, 2012.) Buxton’s music is a study in contrasts: rock and folk, subtle yet eccentric, lush harmonies over prickly guitar. The band, known for their explosive, folk-based rock songs, will play in Austin on Jan 28th and in Houston February 4th celebrating their record release and then continue on tour around the country including shows in Cincinnati, Chicago, Nashville and Atlanta. The band will also perform several times during the South By Southwest Festival in Austin this March. A full list of tour dates is below.

Buxton’s fusion of lovely harmonies, jarring explosions of energy and meticulously applied instrumentation is led by Sergio Trevino on Vocals/Guitar with Jason Willis on lead Guitar/Mandolin, Chris Wise on Bass Guitar, Justin Terrell on Drums and Austin Sepulvado on Guitar/Vocals. Haley Barnes often joins the group on keyboard and harmony vocals. The band, with two self-released albums, is already garnering critical praise with the [Houston Press](http://Houston Press) declaring “Simply put, these guys are getting ridiculously good.”
