SLEEPING THROUGH THE WAR THIS FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 24th, 2017

DECIBEL MAGAZINE PREMIERES FULL ALBUM STREAM

ADDITIONAL U.S. TOUR DATES ANNOUNCED

"They are the real deal - psychedelic blues-rock warriors who pray at the altar of Black Sabbath, space out like Pink Floyd and shred away their bummers like Blue Cheer." SPIN

The Nashville-based psych-rock quartet All Them Witches are set to return with Sleeping Through The War via New West Records this Friday, February 24th, 2017. The 8-song, 46 minute set was produced by the Grammy Awarding winning producer Dave Cobb (Chris Stapleton, Sturgill Simpson, Jason Isbell) and Decibel Magazine is streaming the album in full a week ahead of release. They state, "All Them Witches have built their own sound over each release since their first in 2012, and they're really setting themselves apart on their brand new full-length." Sleeping Through The War follows the band's acclaimed Dying Surfer Meets His Maker released last year. The fundamental laws that govern Sleeping Through The War are the same that have made All Them Witches a cult favorite - big fuzz, deep grooves, cosmic vision -- but years of jamming their way across the country and three European tours in 2016 alone have made their songcraft more dynamic, more responsive, and years of psychic interactions between band members has lead them into a headier sonic space. Their recent performance at the Voodoo Music Festival was met with rave reviews with Stereogum calling them a highlight of the weekend and SPIN stating "They are the read deal - psychedelic blues-rock warriors who pray at the altar of Black Sabbath, space out like Pink Floyd and shred away their bummers like Blue Cheer." Noisey premiered the new video for the single "3-5-7" which can be seen Here while Conan O'Brien's Team Coco premiered the video for the album's first single, "Bruce Lee" Here. Sleeping Through The War will be available digitally, on compact disc, and LP and can be pre-ordered Here.

The band's sound on Sleeping Through The War has become so expansive, you can hear echoes of Dr. John's Gris-Gris, the glacial expanses of Sigur Ros, the stoner sludge of Kyuss, and the meditative om of the East. "We wrote it in about six days," says guitarist Ben McLeod. "Where in the past we would have just gone ahead and written and recorded in the studio, we were like nah we're going to do it with Dave, let's be prepared. It was real minimal, Dave didn't want us to get too crazy." He added, "We wanted a record you could crank. And we wanted girl backup singers." It might seem like an odd detail -- the appearance of the Nashville songstress' Caitlin Rose, Erin Rae, and Tristen on backing vocals add a classic rock flourish, at odds with their own work, but it makes sense within the context of the songs and within the context of their career. All Them Witches are at their Ummagumma moment, their Bare Trees, their Tres Hombres. Singer/bassist Charles Michael Parks offered, "We're trying to get to something better -- not necessarily just as musicians -- but as people. I've always said that as we change as people, our music changes, that's why we can never make the same records. I can't be in one of those bands. I hope you'll never hear 'another predictable album from All Them Witches.' There's no art in that."

All Them Witches have also announced additional North American tour dates in support of Sleeping Through The War. The tour kicks off in the band's hometown of Nashville, TN on February 24th.
