

Sponsor the Light Bringer Project & Sci-Fest L.A. Science Fiction Writing Competitions

Join The Roswell Award for adult writers from across the globe and The Tomorrow Prize for Los Angeles County high school students. Now in our fifth year, thousands of writers from dozens of countries and numerous Los Angeles high schools have submitted stories. Presented by the Pasadena arts and education nonprofit, Light Bringer Project, and Sci-Fest L.A., these awards challenge writers to explore scientific, social, technological, environmental, and philosophical issues and themes through the powerful sci-fi lens. And, they nurture up-and-coming sci-fi writing talent!

The competitions culminate at the annual LitFest Pasadena in May where the finalists' stories are dramatically read on stage by celebrity guests, followed by the awards presentations.

The Roswell Award for adult writers from across the globe

First, Second, & Third Place

Special Prizes

Women Hold Up Half the Sky Award for feminist themed science fiction

Co-presented by Hollywood NOW & "Artemis Journal"

Best Translated Science Fiction Story
by an author and translator team (translated into English)

Roswell Award celebrity guest readers David Blue, Rico E. Anderson, Tamara Krinsky, & Jonathan Slavin.

The Tomorrow Prize for Los Angeles County high school student writers

First, Second, & Third Place

Special Prize

The Green Feather Award for environmental conservation themed science fiction

Co-presented by the Los Angeles Audubon Society

Tomorrow Prize finalist Chelsea See & celebrity guest reader Jasika Nicole.

