

THE GATHERING FOR JUSTICE 16

ANNUAL REPORT
2021

To our readers:

I am proud to share this 2021 Annual Report with you. Despite the challenges we collectively faced in 2021, The Gathering for Justice continued to grow and thrive in our mission and purpose. I hope you will be as proud as I am to read through the impressive accomplishments of our small but dedicated team.

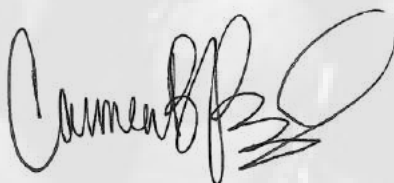

We are building a movement of youth leaders in both New York and California, through culturally rooted and healing-centered activism and leadership development, mentorship and peer support, and intergenerational convenings. The foundation we created in 2021 with the Troublemakers for Liberation Fellowship allows us to take our youth leadership programming to the next level in the coming year.

Looking ahead at 2022, The Gathering will continue to grow and expand our capacity. In addition to continuing the impactful programming which you read about here, we will launch major new initiatives to achieve policy change, build community-based power and make an impact on racial equity in the justice system.

Thank you for supporting our organization and learning more about our work. I hope you will stay engaged in the exciting work we have ahead of us!

In community,

Carmen Perez-Jordan

A CALL TO PHILANTHROPY

BIPOC-led spaces are experiencing an unprecedented amount of resources from philanthropy. How do we sustain interest in funding BIPOC spaces, while not assuming BIPOC needs are monolithic?

We examined this and more in an article co-authored by Dannese Mapanda of The Gathering for Justice and Renée Joslyn of Unboxed Philanthropy Advisors.

THE GATHERING FOR JUSTICE 16

IN CONVERSATION WITH

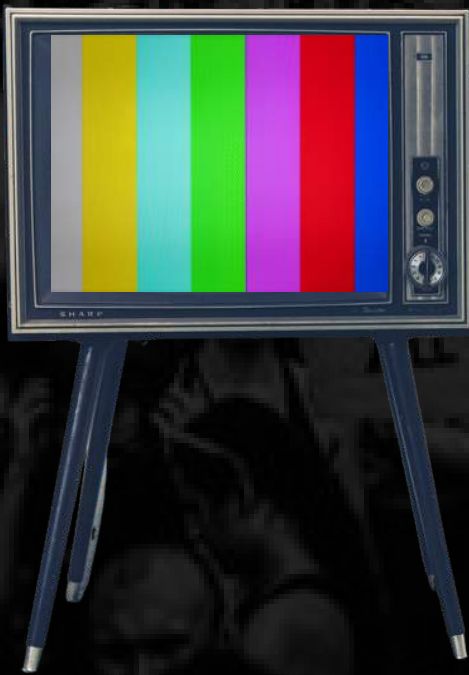

"It is time for a shift. It is time for us who are in and in support of institutional philanthropy to be bolder and more intentional about centering voices and stories of BIPOC and women-led organizations and leaders doing the work throughout various portfolios — not only the "racial justice" and "gender equity" portfolios."

On September 1, we hosted a special conversation with the authors, plus other BIPOC women leaders in the philanthropic space, to discuss strategies for increasing investment in organizations like ours.

"In California, 40% of the population identifies as Latino or Chicano, yet philanthropic funders only fund 1% of Latino and AAPI led organizations."

We put effort into being strategic and clear with our demands when we organize actions. We're proud to say each of our mobilizations made a tangible impact.

As of today, the officer who killed Sean has been fired, an independent report has found the Vallejo Police Department acted inappropriately following the incident, and an investigation into the shooting has been opened by the state Attorney General's office.

The Gathering was the core organizer of two events marking the one-year anniversary of Sean's death. Read the full recap on Medium.

CLOSE YOUTH PRISONS

The Gathering for Justice is part of the statewide effort to implement SB823, which will close youth prisons in the state of California by 2023. Our Senior Regional Organizer, Jasmine Dellafosse sits on the subcommittee for San Joaquin County as well as a community-based diversion committee that provided alternatives to incarceration for 17 young people in 2021.

POLICE FREE SCHOOLS

The Gathering for Justice led powerful advocacy efforts this year to remove police from Stockton's public schools and reinvest in counselors and school community based resources. The Gathering's Senior Regional Organizer Jasmine Dellafosse is an appointed representative for the Community Advisory Committee overseeing the implementation of a Department of Justice settlement with Stockton Unified School District. In this role, she brought attention to the California Attorney General's office around superintendent turnover, violation of the Brown Act, and the layoff of over 100 BIPOC staff in school leadership positions.

- The Gathering co-authored a policy to remove police from public schools and reinvest the funds in counselors and community-based resources to support youth, and she led a series of press conferences and public activations calling for implementation.
- The Gathering also collaborated with the ACLU to produce a comprehensive report highlighting the issue of police in Stockton Unified School District (SUSD).
- The Gathering also partnered with Harvard Law Institute of Politics on a report for SUSD around police budget in schools and needs for investment in alternatives

END ENDLESS JUVENILE PROBATION

The Gathering was part of a coalition pushing for the passage of California AB 503, which would set limitations on youth probation by requiring a court review every six months, with a rebuttable presumption in favor of termination and the goal of helping youth succeed in meeting a small set of individualized goals. AB 503 was filed inactive at the end of the 2021 legislative session but is in good position to be considered again next year.

PROMYSE (PROMOTING YOUTH SUCCESS AND EMPOWERMENT) ACT

Also known as California SB 493, the PROMYSE Act will improve the Juvenile Justice Crime Prevention Act (JJCPA) by ensuring adequate oversight, equitable decision-making, and effective investments prioritizing youths' most critical needs in communities. SB 493 was held in this year's legislative session, but momentum is building for this legislation going into 2022.

ETHNIC STUDIES

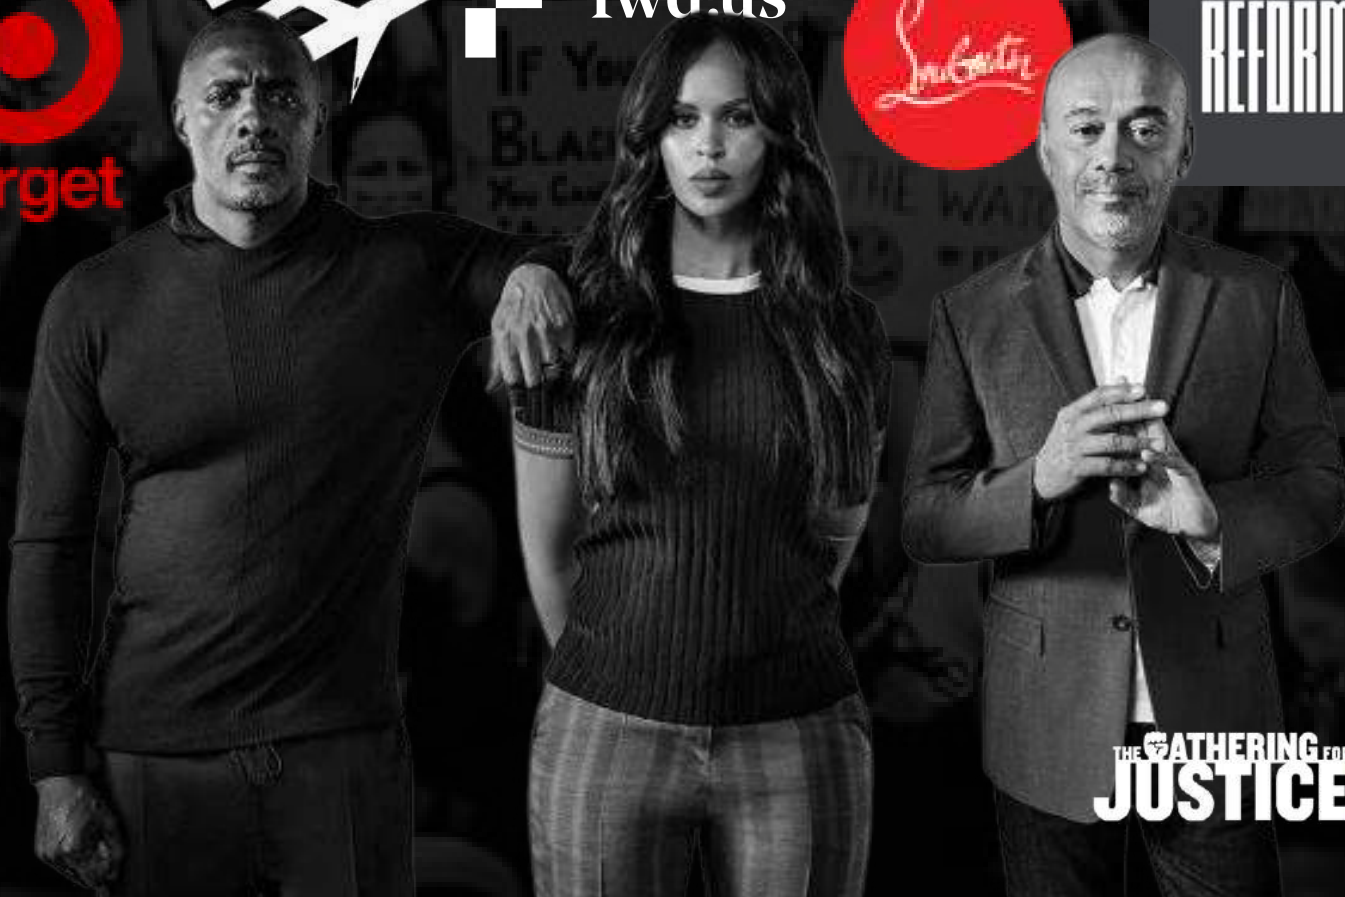

The Gathering was part of a statewide effort in California to advocate for requiring ethnic studies curricula in public schools. Jasmine Dellafosse is part of the Stockton Ethnic Studies Coalition which was fundamental in this work and will continue to advocate for this policy change within the CA Department of Education in 2022.

EXTERNAL PARTNERSHIPS & FEATURES

This year, The Gathering benefited from several important partnerships that raised either money, awareness of work, or both.

fwd.us

ROC NATION

The Gathering for Justice and Roc Nation have cultivated an impactful partnership to drive resources into the movement for racial justice and decarceration. Following the wisdom that "there's a lane for everyone in this movement", Roc Nation has leveraged their expertise in strategic ways to support grassroots organizing, nonviolent civil disobedience, training and leadership development. The Gathering for Justice is not the only nonprofit organization they've collaborated with, but we are proud to say that we are a trusted partner who is demonstrating impact in police accountability and anti-incarceration.

JUSTICE 16

In 2021, Roc Nation brought many opportunities to us, including the Louboutin partnership and booths at the Made in America Festival in Philadelphia, PA and the Team Roc Job Fair in Madison Square Garden, NYC. Roc Nation also supported our efforts to organize the Justice for Sean One-Year Anniversary Rally in front of San Francisco City Hall on June 6, 2021. We are grateful for their ongoing support and partnership!

LOUBOUTIN & IDRIS ELBA: WALK A MILE IN MY SHOES

The Gathering for Justice was selected to be a recipient of the proceeds from the Walk A Mile in My Shoes, a great initiative from Christian Louboutin and Idris and Sabrina Elba. The collection--which has sold out--was designed to raise awareness about the social and racial injustices faced by many around the world. The Walk a Mile in My Shoes capsule successfully raised nearly $400,000 for The Gathering for Justice!

TARGET GIVING CIRCLE

target

The Gathering for Justice was invited by Target to be a featured charity for their Giving Circle Program. People who shop at Target automatically earn points and can allocate those points to a charity of their choice using Target's app. The Gathering for Justice was one of the charity options available to New Yorker shoppers, a spotlight which ran July to September 2021 and raised $10,012.
