

Centennial Towers, One Tower Place, South San Francisco, CA
Myers Development Company, with SOM Architects
Phase I: September 2007- February 2009
New Construction, approximately 350,000 square feet office/retail tower with public theater and outdoor space

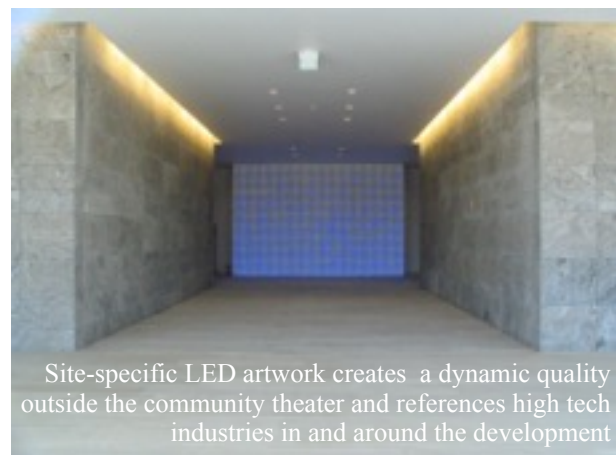

Challenges: Create a high caliber art collection that will appeal to potential future tenants in the technology industry as well as to the community.
Worked with developer and art collector Jack Myers to identify interior and public art opportunities for the new office tower and mixed-use development geared toward technology and biotechnology tenants. Commissioned and installed works by internationally recognized artists. Identified artist and obtained city approval for public art proposal to be executed at later phase.

City -approved future public art commission

Large-scale commissioned paintings by internationally renowned artists create a museum-like environment

Site-specific LED artwork creates a dynamic quality outside the community theater and references high tech industries in and around the development
