

Christian leadership (as described in 1 Timothy 3:1-13 and Titus 1:5-9) involves a calling to model selflessness for the good of the larger Christian community. Therefore, by accepting a leadership role at Azusa Pacific University, I aspire to:

- know and serve the Lord Jesus Christ as my first love
- live publicly and privately in a manner that is consistent with my commitment to Christ and the relationship I have with Him
- demonstrate accountability by practicing confession, truth telling, transparency, and authenticity
- guard what I watch, read, and listen to knowing that I bear the fruit of what I consume
- honor the principle of Sabbath by intentionally taking time to be still and listen to God
- act in intentional ways to help build and maintain Christ-centered community at APU
- participate in and contribute to a local faith community
- actively cultivate my awareness of social issues impacting the local, global and campus community, beginning in the city of Azusa
- honor God with my conduct in all relationships, including:
  - choosing to embrace God-honoring diversity
  - choosing sexual purity, modesty, and celibacy outside of a marriage covenant
  - choosing to abstain from the use of alcohol and illegal drugs
- honor God with my intellect, in my studies, my vocation, my future
- respect and support all university positional statements and to respect and abide by all student standards of conduct, academic integrity policy, and other campus policies
- fulfill any additional expectations my supervisors may have for me as a student leader

I have read the above and aspire to lead in accordance with these principles.
