Battle of the Sexes

This FRIDAY at 6:00pm... join us for our next fellowship event at the BCM House. It will be a time of fun and games.

For the last two years and two months I have taken the same route to our campus every week. This week I went a different way and noticed new, different, and exciting things. I drove through different communities and saw another side of God's awe-invoking creation. Having noticed all this, God showed me a connection between this and the Christian life. As college students, we live structured lives with school, classes, appointments, and clubs, but we all have different goals and ideas about how we can honor Christ with our time in college. One might pursue a path to work in the medical field in hopes that they may provide some comfort to those having difficult health issues. One might work to learn languages and use the mastery of which to be able understand different nationalities and communicate with them in their own dialect. One might desire to become a high school teacher in order to show teenagers that there are good adult role models left in the world. Romans 8:28 says, "We know all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are called according to His purpose. Despite our differences, we all have a common end goal: to serve God. This applies to the driving analogy in the sense that even though I took a different route, I still ended up at the same destination. It is important to remember that even though we have our own tasks and trials, we are not alone. There are other brothers and sisters in Christ who have their own tasks and trials, so, child of God, when you are bogged down in the muck and mire of this worldly life, remember there are others in the same situation. They are just on a little different route.

"You will be enriched in every way to be generous in every way, which through us will produce thanksgiving to God. For the ministry of this service is not only supplying the needs of the saints, but is also overflowing in many thanksgivings to God."

Praying that even in this crazy month of tests and schedules that we are overflowing in thanksgivings to God! True giving can only flow out of a grateful heart, but so often it's difficult to be grateful when we become bogged down with all the stress and hardships in life. Stop and take a minute to breath. Make a list of all the ways that God has been faithful this semester, prayers that have been answered, and general things that you are thankful for. More often than not, our list of blessings far exceeds our list of burdens. But even in seasons of true trial, we still cling to the promise of our Savior's love and can be left speechless when we think about how He came and sacrificed His everything so that we could be restored in our relationship with God.

November begins a new month of sacrificial giving, and we pray that you would join with us this month in becoming a cheerful giver. When we give to BCM, our financial gift is being used to fund and plan opportunities for our own BCM family to share the gospel this summer! Scripture talks about how every step of the sharing process is important: the sending, the sowing, and the reaping. Without the sending of missionaries, the message of the gospel is limited. Remember also that giving is more than monetary gifts! Giving is of your time, your friendship, and your resources. Be creative this month and brainstorm other ways that you can create a month of giving! Giving is transformative and grows the body together in dependence on one another. And the best part of all is that it changes us!

Join us this month in prayer and support for those missionaries that have already been sent and for those who will be going this December to China, over spring break, and our SMN summer missionaries! You all are loved, valued, and deeply appreciated by your BCM family!
