Program Overview

The Faculty in Residence and Faculty Guide program is a partnership between Academic Affairs and Student Engagement. It provides faculty members with unique opportunities to connect with students in a residential setting.

The faculty facilitate educational and cultural development activities for their residential communities and around Washington, DC, such as: programs, events, and informal interactions with GW residential students.

In this role, faculty collaborate with Resident Advisors, Residence Directors, and Area Coordinators to build and support community in their residential area.

Program Benefits

The program provides faculty opportunities for university service, an increased understanding of student culture across GW, and financial support for programming and engagement.

Faculty in Residence live in a University provided apartment and are appointed to a two year term, renewable for up to three terms. Faculty Guides receive a $7500 stipend and are appointed to a one year renewable term.
