Each year our May / June newsletter’s topic is “Mother’s Day / Father’s Day,” yet admittedly our publication tends to center more on Mother’s Day, rather than Father’s Day. So this year I decided to write my front page article about the dads.

By human nature I am sure Mother’s Day is more difficult on us moms than Father’s Day is on the dads, but I know they hurt, too, maybe just more privately and internally. From my own personal experience, as well as what I have observed from countless couples who have lost a baby, the men tend to be far more concerned for their wives on Mother’s Day than we are for our husbands on Father’s Day. True, perhaps they don’t grieve quite as openly as we do on this particular Sunday, but let’s not assume they aren’t hurting just because they may not be showing their sorrow as outwardly as we do.

I’ve written many times in this newsletter the phrase, “Yes, you are a mom!” to the women who lost their only child and wonder if they “qualify” to be recognized on Mother’s Day. But I’ve never said the same to the men who wonder if they deserve to be acknowledged as a father on Father’s Day. So now I will say it, “Yes, men, you are dads!” I know June 20 will be a bitter-sweet day for you, but take pride in the fact that you are a father. You made a child who may not be here to serve you breakfast in bed or gift you with a tie, but you have indeed fathered a child and should be proud of it!

Ladies, I encourage us all to bestow extra love on our men on this day. Give him a gift in memory of your baby, talk to him, and let him know you know he’s hurting even if he’s silent.

On both of these Sundays, plan to spend the day together meeting each other’s needs the best you can. Openly talk about your baby, remembering the excitement and joy you experienced together while you were expecting or during the time your baby lived. Create memories, and most importantly, celebrate that, indeed, you are both parents!

You’re A Man Now
Anita Robertson

You’re a man now, son, and men don’t cry.
You’ll never see a tear in a real man’s eye.

Macho, he-man, the leader of the pack,
Walk on alone and never look back.

That’s what they say, but it’s not exactly true.
There’s a much finer man, son,
who lives inside of you.

You had nothing in your hands
when we brought you into life.
Never use those hands, son,
to bring discord and strife.

Put your arm around a shoulder and a twinkle in your eye.
You can even love your enemies if you want to try.

Be a man of compassion with a heart full of love,
A strong, iron hand in a velvet-covered glove.

Lift a load that is heavy,
bandage wounds that are sore.
If you want to be a leader,
you must be a servant more.

The world will promise laughter and good times in a pill;
Be careful what you swallow in seeking for a thrill.

And when there is a time to cry for promises unkept,
Remember, when there was a need...even Jesus wept.

Low production of serotonin in the brainstem a likely cause for SIDS
Doctors closing in on mysterious cause of death in infants

Boston, Mass. – Taking the next step in more than 20 years of research, researchers at Children’s Hospital Boston have linked sudden infant death syndrome (SIDS) with low production of serotonin in the brainstem, based on a comparison of brainstem samples from infants dying of SIDS compared to brainstems of infants dying from other, known causes.

The findings, published in the Feb. 3, 2010 issue of The Journal of the American Medical Association, may give a concrete approach to identifying babies at risk for SIDS, the leading cause of death for infants between 1 and 12 months old in the United States.

In the brainstem, serotonin helps regulate some of the body’s involuntary actions, such as breathing, heart rate and blood pressure during sleep. The researchers, led by Children’s neuropathologist Hannah Kinney, MD, believe that a low serotonin level impairs the function of the brainstem circuits that regulate these activities, putting a baby at risk for sudden death from stresses such as rebreathing carbon dioxide when sleeping in the face down position.

Parents should remove unnecessary SIDS risk factors, Kinney says. During pregnancy, there is no safe level of alcohol a mother can drink and no safe level of smoking, both firsthand and secondhand. Until 12 months of age, babies should sleep on their backs in a crib with a firm mattress, and without toys, soft pillows, excessive blanketing or excessive clothing.

This study was supported by funds from the First Candle/SIDS Alliance, CJ Martin Overseas Fellowship, the CJ Murphy Foundation, the National Institute of Child Health and Development, and the Developmental Disabilities Research Center at Children’s Hospital Boston.

Children’s Hospital Boston is home to the world’s largest research enterprise based at a pediatric medical center, where its discoveries have benefited both children and adults since 1869. More than 500 scientists, including eight members of the National Academy of Sciences, 13 members of the Institute of Medicine and 12 members of the Howard Hughes Medical Institute comprise Children’s research community. Founded as a 20-bed hospital for children, Children’s Hospital Boston today is a 396-bed comprehensive center for pediatric and adolescent health care grounded in the values of excellence in patient care and sensitivity to the complex needs and diversity of children and families. Children’s also is the primary pediatric teaching affiliate of Harvard Medical School. For more information about the hospital and its research visit: www.childrenshospital.org/newsroom.
A Father That Day

I didn’t think to bring a camera that day. Pain and fear had taken over initially—medication and fatigue soon after. Forty hours it would take. Forty hours in which my husband held my hand, paced the floor, ate sandwiches brought to him and took showers to stay awake. Forty hours of not grasping the reality—forty hours of our life that would change us forever.

My husband was to be a father for the first time. A ribbon on the door let others know—voices were lowered, sympathetic gazes and condolences replaced hearty handshakes and back clasps. Incompatible with life—a term we learned just three weeks prior. HELLP syndrome—a phrase we knew for 40 hours.

3 p.m. Sunday—a father watches his first son being born. Silent and tiny—no cry—no words. Quietly the nurses took Aiden while his father followed. I watched as my husband—a father held his boy. A father called the funeral home and filled out the death certificate. A father worried about his boy: where was he, when would the director come, has he been moved? A father.

There are no pictures of father and son. Yet my mind still sees it clearly. A father was made that day.

Mother’s Day Thoughts

I always thought that once I was able to have a child of my own, Mother’s Day would not be a challenging day for me anymore. While I celebrate Mother’s Day and am so grateful to finally be able to feel a part of this annual recognition, I still think about the babies I lost. No, it’s not that kind of intense and complicated grief that I once experienced when so fresh in my pain. But, I do still think about how, if I hadn’t miscarried in January 2007, I’d have a little girl this Mother’s Day. How she’d be a big sister to my 1-year-old son. How maybe they’d hold hands as we walked up to the church doors. How we might do something cheesy like coordinate our dresses.

The truth is, I missed church on Mother’s Day for several years before having my son. My grief was so intense and painful that I knew I would leave the service blubberging, because with that kind of pain there is no dainty “church” cry. While I wouldn’t miss attending church on that special day for the world now, I miss those two dreams that I carried in me for such a fleeting time.

It is complicated how the joy of being a mother and the longing for the babies I lost somehow co-exist. It is amazing that anybody can make sense out of it at all… but I know that my Creator understands. While He may not make sense of it all for me, He is there to comfort me when I turn to Him…on Mother’s Day and any other day. God bless our babies in heaven.

Birthday Tributes

Happy 4th Birthday, Ryker Lee!

Wow! We can’t believe that you are turning 4 years old! The last year has been a complete blur for us. Your older sister, Mariah, was in a horrible car accident 11 days after your birthday last year and has a Traumatic Brain Injury. She has been in Nebraska in two different rehab facilities since getting out of the hospital in July. Daddy and I have been driving to Nebraska weekly since the accident to spend our days off of work with her. Derrick turned 11 this year and Kellen will be 3 in July. They have both been troopers through this entire nightmare.

With all this going on, not a day goes by that we don’t think about you. We have your picture up in Mariah’s room and talk about you all the time. As the days pass and the chaos continues, you would think we might miss you less, but in more ways I think we miss you more. Thinking about you growing up and what your personality would be like. Would you have a temper like your baby brother Kellen, or would you be more passive like Mariah and Derrick? We believe in our hearts that we will be brought together again and get the answers to all the questions we have about you. Until that day, please keep shining down on us through this difficult time with sissy and being without you!

Happy birthday, Monkey!

We love you so much and miss you tons!
Mommy, Daddy, Mariah, Derrick, and Kellen

P.S. Give Grandma Jan, Great-Grandma White Hair, and Great-Grandpa Aldape our love.

Happy 3rd Birthday, Gracie!

It doesn’t seem possible that it has been three years since we held you in our arms for such a short while. You were such a special gift and we are so grateful for every minute we got to have you here with us. Not a day goes by that you are not in our thoughts. We have so many things we would have liked to tell you and so many questions about what would have been. Would you have been an ornery little thing like Daddy, with blond hair and blue eyes? Or would you have had Momma’s dark curls and hazel eyes? We’re sure you would have had all of us wrapped around your little finger. We hope you and your little sister Emma know just how much we love you. Happy third birthday, sweet little one!

We love you more than you know, with all our hearts, forever and ever.

Happy 1st Birthday, Lilli!

Dearest Baby Lilli,
Your Daddy, Emma and I miss you so much every day. Emma talks about you and how she wishes that you were here, and that she could “just hold” you. I think we all feel that way. Emma just turned 4, and you would be turning 1. Emma sent you a balloon on her birthday, and I think we will do that again, for your birthday (I hope that you are getting them). Have fun with your Heavenly Father, and we will see you soon!

All our love,
Mommy, Daddy, Emma, Grammy, Papa, Grandma, Grandpa, Uncle Stephen, Jack, and Max!

Happy 1st Birthday, Lauren Ashley!

We can’t believe that it has already been a year since you left our world, but for Mommy and Daddy the pain of missing you is as real now as it was then. We may not understand why things happen in this life, but the one thing we are sure about is you are the most precious gift to ever come into ours. There truly is nothing that compares to the love between a parent and a child, and even though you are no longer with us, we still feel that eternal bond every day of our lives. We hope that you have nothing but happiness up in heaven with your grandparents; what a beautiful woman you would have turned into. There will come a time when the three of us will be together again, just as we once were a year ago for a brief moment. Until then we will be celebrating your first birthday with you in our hearts.

We love you and we miss you more than words can say!

Happy 1st Birthday, Amani!

Amani,
As this year approaches, Mommy still has a very big hole in her heart. My love, my angel, I miss you so much as every day goes by. I wish I could hold you in my arms one more time and see that beautiful tiny face.

One year has gone by and it hurts so much not having you my love. Your big sister Ashley will always miss you. She was ready to share her room with you, my angel. Daddy was ready to be the best dad ever. Don’t forget to watch over your little sister Faith and now it is time to go play with the angels.

Love,
Mommy, Daddy,

Happy 2nd Birthday, Sweet Boys!

My Dear Three,
Another year has gone by and I can still feel the wonder and awe from the first moment I saw your sweet faces. The little time that I had you in my arms has made me such a better person and a better mother. Your little brothers were born this year and with each new discovery as a mom, I can’t help but think of you boys. You will always be such an important part of our lives and I know that you are always so close. I love you so very much Hudson Wrenn, Weston Cole and Jackson Reed. Can it be that you now turn seven; another birthday up in heaven?
These years are not easy without you; we adjust to ways that are new.
We love you so much in every way and miss you countless times each day!
Someday in heaven together we’ll be; hearts filled with joy for all eternity.
But for now, on this your special day we celebrate you and pause to say:
Happy, happy birthday, Matthew!

Happy 1st Birthday, Emma!

Dear Emma,

Your short life has changed the life of many people forever. We can’t believe it has been a year since we first met you and held you.

We always remember how you fought and how you pulled out the cables with your tiny hand. We also remember that you were strong enough to hold daddy’s finger and open your eyes to look at mommy, even though you were very tired.

We can’t stop thinking about what you would be doing, playing, or how you would be waiting for daddy to come home every week from work. We just want to have a peaceful 5th of May. We should be celebrating your first birthday with you, but we are celebrating your short life instead.

We do really miss you and love you.

Silent Footprints

We never had the chance to play to laugh to rock to wiggle.

We long to hold you touch you now and listen to you giggle.

I’ll always be your mom;
He’ll always be your dad.

You will always be our child—the child we never had.

But now you’re gone, and yet you’re here;
we’ll sense you everywhere.

You are our sorrow and our joy;
There’s love in every tear.

Just know our love goes deep and strong.
We’ll forget you never.

What Makes A Mother?

I thought of you all, I closed my eyes
And prayed to God today.
I asked what makes a Mother
And I know I heard Him say, A mother has a baby.

This we know is true.
But God can you be a mother
When your baby’s not with you?

“Yes you can!” He replied with confidence in His voice.
“I give many women babies, when they leave it is not their choice.”

“Some I send for a lifetime, and others for a day.
And some I send to feel your womb
But there’s no need to stay.”

I just don’t understand this God,
I want my baby here.
He took a breath and cleared His throat, and then I saw a tear.

“I wish I could show you what your child is doing today.
If you could see your child smile with other children and say, ‘We go to earth to learn our lessons of love and life and fear. My mommy loved me oh so much I got to come straight here.
I feel so lucky to have a Mom who had so much love for me. I learned my lesson very quick.
My Mommy set me free.
I miss my Mommy oh so much, but I visit her each day. When she goes to sleep, on her pillow’s where I lay.
I stroked her hair and kiss her cheek and whisper in her ear, ‘Mommy don’t be sad today. I’m your baby and I’m here.’

“So you see my dear sweet one, Your children are okay.
Your babies are here in my home and this is where they’ll stay.
They’ll wait for you with me Until your lesson is through.
And on that day that you come home They’ll be at the gates for you.

So now you see what makes a Mother. It’s the feeling in your heart.
It’s the love you had so much of right from the very start.
Though some on earth may not realize That you are a Mother until their time is done.
They’ll be up here with me one day and you’re the best one.

Legacy Giving
Losing a child has changed each of our lives forever. We appreciate all financial support of the services our organization gives to bereaved parents—no matter the size of the contribution. However, some of you may have the capacity and desire to give a lifelong gift to M.E.N.D.

If you’re interested in creating a legacy gift or endowment in honor of your baby, we would be happy to assist you in gathering the necessary information to remember our organization in your will or trust. Please contact Rebekah Mitchell at rebekah@mend.org for more information about legacy giving.

Chapter Corner

M.E.N.D. Chapter Updates

Kansas
M.E.N.D.—Kansas will celebrate its fifth anniversary in Emporia this May. I would like to thank all the families who have come to MEND for sharing a part of their life.

Stephanie Metzger

Houston
M.E.N.D.—Houston is looking forward to our fourth annual Texas Hold’em Poker Fundraiser. Please contact me if you have an interest in playing in this fun event benefiting M.E.N.D.

Jaimie Crump

Texarkana
Toni Sherman, Tani Greer, Melissa Thomas, and I traveled to Dallas for a fantastic weekend at the Leadership Conference. Wow! It was great to see all of the chapter directors, assistants, and board of directors. I can’t wait to see how God is going to use M.E.N.D.—Texarkana to minister to grieving families in our area.

Monica Davis

Hill Country
M.E.N.D.—Hill Country is reaching out to surrounding towns to generate more attendance for our monthly support group meetings. If you know of any bereaved families in the area, please contact me at Larissa@mend.org.

Larissa Hallford

Tulsa
First, I would like to give a big “Thank You” to Jo Ann Hammack for all the work she has done in helping M.E.N.D.—Tulsa find an ornament for our upcoming Walk to Remember Ceremony this October. Our chapter could not function without our volunteers! A special thanks also goes to First Baptist Church of Tulsa for their financial contribution for the upcoming Walk to Remember Ceremony as well as supporting the ministry of M.E.N.D. through prayer.

Michele Wilson

SW Missouri
M.E.N.D.—Southwest Missouri is excited about “Dreaming” for future outreach through our two major hospital systems, a partnership with volunteers at the Local Global Impact missions conference at Second Baptist Church, and two fundraisers this spring. Special thanks to our assistants Heather Bass, Kathryn Gold and Ruth Sonnenberg for their dedication to our ministry. These women have either attended trainings locally or in Dallas over the last few months, and assisted with setup and tear down, as well as greeting at every one of our monthly meetings. They truly make our mission known throughout their spheres of influence. Our chapter wouldn’t be the same without them.

One final special thank you to April Moreton, former director of the NW Arkansas chapter for selflessly passing on her supplies to our chapter for our upcoming Christmas Ceremony.

Heather Fann
Bryan/College Station
M.E.N.D.—Bryan/College Station had our first meeting in March and everything went great! We welcomed many new families and continue to reach out to families in the community who might need us. We are really looking forward to what God has in store for this new chapter in the coming months!

When Mother’s Day is Difficult

On May 9, we’ll celebrate Mother’s Day once again. For many, it’s a time of appreciation and joy. For others, it can be one of the most difficult days of the year. This is often true for women facing infertility, families who have recently experienced the loss of a mother, and many other painful situations.

I’ve learned what it’s like for Mother’s Day to be difficult through my work as a writer for DaySpring. Each year we receive letters about our “Difficult Mother’s Day” cards. One woman expressed her appreciation and then said, “I spent seven very painful Mother’s Days longing for motherhood while dealing with infertility and the losses of eight children through miscarriage and failed adoptions. I’ve also seen my own mother’s grief and struggle through Mother’s Day after the death of her mother. And I have many friends in less-than-ideal situations with their children.”

I’ve learned what it’s like for Mother’s Day to be difficult through my experience as a graduate student in the counseling program at John Brown University. As the final step to completing my degree, I’m doing an internship through the women’s ministry and counseling center of my church, which has almost 10,000 members. I’ve walked the journey of grief with many and I’ve found that experiencing sadness on special occasions is common. These days often serve as reminders of what we have lost or do not yet have.

Finally, and most importantly, I’ve learned what it’s like for Mother’s Day to be difficult through my personal struggle with infertility. So as Mother’s Day comes this year, I’d like to share a few thoughts with you. These are taken from my own journey as well as my training at DaySpring and in the Counseling program.

Embrace Your Emotions

First, if Mother’s Day is difficult for you then give yourself permission to grieve. When holidays come, we often put expectations on ourselves to feel a certain way. We may think, “This is a special occasion. I have to put on a happy face and make the best of it.” But it’s okay to feel sad and even cry. As the authors of The Empty Chair: Handling Grief on Holidays and Special Occasions say simply and powerfully, “We grieve because we loved.”

It’s also helpful to realize that emotions are not good or bad. They are just messengers that tell us about what’s going on in our lives. Sadness tells us, “You’ve lost something or someone important to you.” It’s not a sin to feel sad. Jesus often experienced sadness and the Bible says he was “a man of sorrows, and familiar with grief” (ISAIAH 53:3 NIV).

Sometimes we need to help others understand our sadness. People who are trying to comfort us may say things like, “At least your loved one is in a better place now.” Words like these can make us feel guilty for being sad. People who say these things are often really trying to tell us, “I care about you. I want you to feel better. So I’m going to say anything and everything I can think of that might help.” Sometimes we need to gently share with those around us that what we really need is for them to just be there and listen.

In Psalm 13 King David pours out his heart to the Lord and asks, “How long must I wrestle with my thoughts and every day have sorrow in my heart?” He ends by saying, “I will sing to the Lord, for he has been good to me.” Does that mean we need to go from feeling broken to blessed in just a few lines? No, absolutely not. But it does show us something important about emotions. They are meant to be detours rather than destinations. If you continually feel sad over an extended period of time, or it seems as if there is no hope, then you may want to consider getting help.

Seek Support

Sometimes we need to be alone to experience our emotions, but usually it is wise to seek support. From the very beginning of creation, God said it wasn’t good for man to be alone. This is especially true when we are grieving. Jesus modeled this when he was in the Garden of Gethsemane. He brought several of his disciples with him and said, “My soul is overwhelmed with sorrow to the point of death. Stay here and keep watch with me” (MATTHEW 26:38 NIV).

Support can take many different forms. Hopefully, you have close friends and family members who can walk through this time with you. It’s important not to assume they know you need their comfort. Unless they have experienced a similar loss, they don’t know what it’s like. So don’t be afraid to call them or tell them what you need. You won’t be imposing. They probably want to help but don’t know what to do.

Even family members and close friends can grow weary at times, so it’s helpful to have other sources of support. Counselors can be a great source of support because they’re trained to work with loss. Support groups can also provide comfort. You can learn from those who are further down the road and offer help to those just beginning their journeys.

Of course, our strongest supporter will always be God. This may not feel as if it is true, especially during a time of loss in our lives. Right now you may be angry at God, disappointed in him, or feel as if you don’t have any faith left at all. That’s normal and many godly people throughout history have experienced similar feelings. God understands that you are hurt. It’s okay to bring all of those emotions to him.

El Día de la Madre y el Día del Padre

Cada año el tema de nuestro boletín de mayo y junio es "día de la madre / día del padre", pero hay que reconocer que nuestra publicación se tiende a centrar más sobre el día de la madre, en lugar del día del padre. Por lo tanto este año decidí escribir mi artículo acerca de los papas.

Por naturaleza humana estoy segura que el día de las madres es más difícil para nosotras las mamas que para los papas en el día de los padres, pero yo se que ellos sufren también, tal vez de manera más interna y privada. De mi experiencia personal y de lo que he observado en innumerables parejas que han perdido un bebe, los hombres tienden a preocuparse mas por sus esposas en el día de la madre de lo que nosotras nos preocupamos por ellos en el día del padre. Y es cierto, tal vez no sufren de manera abierta como lo hacemos nosotras en ese domingo en particular, pero no asumamos que no están sufriendo solo por el hecho de que no están demostrando su dolor externamente como lo hacemos nosotras.

He escrito muchas veces en este boletín la frase ―Si, tu eres una mama‖ a las mujeres que perdieron a su único hijo y se preguntan si ellas “califican” a ser reconocidas en el día de las madres. Pero nunca he dicho lo mismo a los hombres que se preguntan si merecen ser reconocidos como padres en el Día del Padre. Así que ahora lo diré “Si, tú eres un papa”. Sé que este 20 de junio va a ser un día amargo para ti, pero toma fuerza y enorgullécte del hecho de que eres un padre. Tú hiciste a un niño que hoy no puede estar aquí para servirte el desayuno en la cama o para regalarte una corbata, pero de hecho has concebido un bebé y deberías de sentirte muy orgulloso de él.

Esposas, yo las animo a otorgar amor adicional a nuestros hombres en ese día, denles un regalo en memoria de su bebé, hablen con él y hazle saber que tú sabes, que él sufre aunque él lo haga en silencio.

En estos dos domingos, planea pasar el día juntos complaciendo uno al otro lo mejor que se pueda. Hablen abiertamente de su bebé, recordando la emotin y la alegría que experimentaron juntos mientras estabas embarazada o durante el tiempo que vivió tu bebé. Crea recuerdos y lo más importante, celebren que de hecho ambos padres!

Normal grief and mourning can turn into serious depression. One of the symptoms of depression is withdrawing and isolating ourselves from others. If you find you are cutting off relationships, have no desire to be with other people, and are spending much more time alone than usual, it may be a sign that you're experiencing depression.

Do Something Special

While doing something special when you are sad may feel a bit overwhelming, it’s important because it will help you be proactive rather than reactive in addressing your loss. Many people think that it’s better to avoid or bury their grief. But the opposite is actually true. Healing only comes when we acknowledge and embrace our losses. As Dr. Gary Oliver says, “If you bury an emotion, it's always buried alive.”

The kind of action you take depends on your personality and the nature of your loss. For example, if you lost your mother then you might write her a letter. If you lost an unborn child, you might donate to a crisis pregnancy center in his or her honor. You and your spouse might look at photos of the sister you lost to breast cancer or visit a place where you used to go together. You may think, “But that will make me sad!”

That’s okay. Experiencing grief is part of healing.

Grief and Trauma Counselor H. Norman Wright even recommends a “programmed cry” in which you set aside a specific time to grieve and place yourself in an environment where you are able to do so. He says in Recovering from Losses in Life, “Some of us have never learned to cry. We are afraid to really let go with our tears. We live with fears and reservations about crying. We cry on the inside but never on the outside.” Each time you allow yourself to grieve through tears, it will become a little bit easier to do so.

You can also simply do something nice for yourself. If you enjoy going to restaurants, then have a special meal with a friend or spouse. If you like taking long walks or bubble baths, make time in the day for that activity. Part of getting through grief is taking care of you. As long as it isn’t something harmful or numbing, doing something special for yourself can help you through a difficult day.

Hold Onto Hope

At one point in my journey it seemed as if I couldn’t take another step. In addition to infertility, I was facing several other losses. I felt as if I were in a dark cave. But then I sensed the Lord gently and lovingly speak to my heart, “You may be in a cave, but you still have a choice. You can sit in despair or you can diamond-mine your difficulties.” I decided I was not leaving that time in my life empty-handed. I was taking every hidden blessing I could find. Of course, I still had difficult days. But choosing hope made a difference.

As a reminder, I now wear two rings. The one on the fourth finger of my left hand represents my commitment to my husband. The one on the fourth finger of my right hand is a simple silver band inscribed with the word “hope” and it represents the commitment I have made to God and myself to hold onto hope no matter what happens.

The story of an inspiring woman named Terrie also reminds me to hold onto hope. She endured the loss of 4 pregnancies and waited 17 years before adopting a little girl. She told me, “I think one of the most important parts of this journey is learning to trust God. I don’t mean the flippant kind of trust. It’s easy for people to say, ‘You just need to trust God.’ It’s much harder when you’re in the middle of all this pain. But He is trustworthy. Through it all, God has given us an amazing story. I wouldn’t have chosen this road, but He has been with us. I can look back and truly say every step was worth it.”

I don’t know how my journey will end and you probably don’t know how yours will either. I also don’t know how many of you will be silently grieving your losses as we sit in church together on May 9. But I do know that God sees each one of us. He knows how many hairs are on our heads and how many cares are in our hearts. Whatever you’re going through this Mother’s Day, you’re not facing it alone. As King David, a man who experienced many losses in his life, expressed in Psalm 34:18 NIV, “The Lord is close to the brokenhearted and saves those who are crushed in spirit.” May God surround you with love, fill you with hope, and give you strength for each moment—especially this Mother’s Day.

Dear Honey,

I love you. Outside of God, no one is more important to me in this world than you! When you hurt, I hurt. Nothing is more painful for me than to see you hurting. Remember last year, after our miscarriage, when I held you weeping in my arms? We were both grieving the loss of our precious baby, but the deepest wound for me was seeing your devastation. More recently, when you came home in tears because your friend at work announced her pregnancy, I hurt because you were hurting.

When you hurt, my first thought is, “How can I fix this? How can I take the pain away?” I sometimes forget that I am not God. As a wise pastor once said: “Husbands, we may sense how deeply our wives are hurting...and we may think it is our duty to be a tower of strength. Perhaps we feel that any display of weakness or sorrow on our part will only add to her grief. Nothing could be farther from the truth. Indeed, if our wives sense that our losses don’t affect us, that only isolates them in their grief. We husbands do not have to be towers of strength. That’s God’s job. God is our refuge and our strength, a very present help in trouble” (Psalm 46:1 KJV). It is not unmanly to cry with her; it is a caring and loving thing to do. (“When a Husband Hurts,” Rev. Burton Wilbur, Jr., Stepping Stones, June-July ‘02).

Sometimes in an effort to cheer you up, I have said dumb things like: “Don’t cry! It’ll be okay.” Or at times I have tried to remind you that God is in control and everything will work out for the best. I know in my heart that this is all true, but I also know that those words were not helpful at the moment. Little did I realize that “happy talk” from me did not cheer you up; it only made you feel worse. For on top of all the heartache, you had a husband who didn’t understand!

Thankfully I am learning that I can’t fix your pain, but I can understand it. I have learned that the Bible says, “Weep with those who weep;” it does not say cheer them up with a pep talk. I have learned that what helps you the most is when I simply put my arm around you and say, “This is really hard for you right now, isn’t it? I just want you to know that it hurts me too.”

You and I do not always grieve in the same way. When I am hurting, I tend to clam up and want some alone time. At other times, I just want to hang out with friends and forget the stress and strain.

When you are hurting, you tend to open up. It’s healing for you to talk about your ups and downs. Talking is therapy for you.

I want to spend time with you sharing our hopes and dreams, our disappointments and setbacks. That’s an important part of the oneness that God intends for our marriage.

But do we need to talk about our struggles all the time? Can we resurrect the old “twenty minute rule”? You know, that’s the friendly agreement that allows us to talk about our hurts and hopes for twenty minutes a day, but no more. I can easily handle twenty minutes a day—especially if it leaves time for interesting activities to do together.

As much as I love you, I simply can’t be the only person you talk to. I am not equipped for that.

My favorite Christian author, C.S. Lewis, once said that friendship begins when one person says to another, “What? You too? I thought I was the only one.” That’s the kind of friend I want for you—one who doesn’t feel uncomfortable when you express your dreams and hidden hurts.

You have told me that it’s not easy to find someone who understands. Perhaps our pastor could put you in touch with someone in our church who is in a similar situation. Or maybe you could check the Stepping Stones discussion forums to find a friend online (stepforums.bethany.org). Stepping Stones (ssministry.net) and Resolve (www.resolve.org) also maintain a list of support groups. Maybe one meets in our area.

It feels as if we are in a dark valley. How and when God will bring us to the other side, I don’t know. All I know is that one day He will bring us out of the valley into the sunshine again. In the meantime, with the help of God, I know we can travel through this valley together.

Your loving husband
