Grieving the loss of my two babies is clearly the most painful heartache I have ever experienced. Although men and women certainly grieve differently, I will forever be grateful that my husband and I mourned our losses together. How tragic for couples to not share their sadness with one another! I’ve said many times that parents made the baby together, they lost the baby together so they need to grieve the baby together. However, unfortunately many times this is not the case and moms find themselves grieving alone.

Circumstances vary as to why women feel isolated in their sorrow. The mom may have been single at the time of her loss, has subsequently divorced, or may still be married to the father but he does not show his grief or support his wife in hers. In addition to non-spousal support, oftentimes extended family grows weary with the mom’s bereavement, and the nurturing is short-lived, if it ever existed at all. Therefore, the hurting mom tends to close herself up in a shell of reclusive loneliness, suffering deep mental anguish.

Over the years of directing M.E.N.D., numerous ladies have contacted me, desperate for help because they feel as if they have no one with whom to share their grief. Not only do women call or e-mail me shortly after their loss, they reach out for comfort years following their baby’s death as well. Holidays, birthdays, and anniversaries are extremely difficult days to get through even with a large support system, but going through them alone is unbearable. Not long ago a lady called me explaining that she was recently divorced and had just memorialized her baby’s anniversary in Heaven – by herself. She said at least when they were married, despite their marital trouble, they still recognized the day together. But now she does it alone.

Situations such as these are what inspired me to start M.E.N.D. Despite the support I had from my family and close friends following the loss of Jonathan, I still felt alone in my grief, simply because no one I knew had suffered a similar loss and therefore could not truly relate to my feelings and emotions. I realized there had to be women who were dying in their grief. Not only did they not have anyone to talk to who had lost a baby, but no one around them would talk to them about it at all. I wanted to provide a venue in which we could pour out our hearts and find others who had suffered a loss so we could grieve and heal together. Never did I dream I would start a support group some day that would become a lifesaver not only for me, but also for countless women around the world. The support groups we host in the Dallas/Fort Worth metroplex, this newsletter, and especially our Web site (which has a guestbook that allows people to communicate with one another) are invaluable.

Regardless of the lack of support you may receive from home, I urge you to find someone with whom you can share your feelings. Seek a support group in your area. Call every hospital near you and ask someone in labor and delivery (not the volunteer who answers the hospital’s phone) if they either host a pregnancy and infant loss support group or if they know of one close by. If they do not know of one, ask them or your doctor if they could connect you with another patient who has experienced a loss. Who knows…you may be the charter group! The guestbook on our Web site is another wonderful tool that will enable you to correspond with fellow bereaved moms. Simply browse the posts of others then respond to the ones that are of interest to you. I also encourage you to post a message yourself, and I’m certain others will write you back. Professional counseling is another option. I recommend seeing someone only if they specialize in grief counseling and have personally experienced a loss so that they can relate to you more than just professionally.

I know that no group or person can replace the comfort of a spouse or family member, but please don’t grieve alone. There are multitudes of people and organizations that exist and are waiting for your call. No group is perfect and no one person can take all your pain away, but we can be here for each other and listen with an empathetic ear. I pray that the Lord will send people your way who can be a friend to you during this lonely season of your life.

Rebekah Mitchell
I live in the same city as the Rev. John Claypool, who lost his daughter and wrote about it in a classic entitled Tracks of a Fellow Struggler. He told me once that I am the “most alone” person he has ever met. He was referring to the fact that I was divorced when Stephanie died, as I still am, and completely out of communication with her father, as I still am, plus the fact that I have no siblings or other children. Up until last year, when I lost both of them, I had my parents—my father in his nineties and my mother in her eighties—who were frail and not able to do much more than be there. Now that I have lost both of them, I realize that “being there,” along with prayer, is about all anyone, whether spouse, friend, stranger, or relative, can really do. It is a simple and basic thing, and yet having a loving person “be there” truly is the most, the best, and a very necessary lifeline for the bereaved one.

I am only now sitting back and looking at all my losses—with nothing left to lose but freedom—as the song goes. It’s not true, we know that—in the fact of unbelievable tragedies and losses, we still want to hear the bird’s song and to smell the fresh breeze. One of God’s gifts to us is our will to survive.

How have I survived alone? I am not able to answer with certainty, but I suspect that I have done it in the same ways that other bereaved parents have managed it. We do what we have to do, and we all know that is neither simple nor easy. As far as being single bereaved parents, the down side is obvious. There is no one in the middle of the night to offer soothing words or comforting touches, to silently hold me during those dreadful shuddering moments when I feel I will suffocate from hopelessness and pain of remembering. No one is around for joint decision-making. You don’t call friends for any of this. That would be pushing the boundaries of friendship and we, or I, need to hang onto the friends I have left. The upside—an odd phrase given what we all know about losing a child (that the worst imaginable event in life has occurred and that there is now inside of one a never-ending ache)—is that I grieve alone and with absolute abandon, without concern that my moaning, screaming, or withdrawal will upset my spouse. I do not have to force myself to be on guard with words or actions. I am not on a different grieving track from my spouse, therefore I am not dealing with resentment or misunderstanding from another or having to feel guilty for my own grieving state or for not comforting him. When decisions are necessary there are no differences or friction. The only tension, anger, or moodiness is with myself。

For four and a half years after Stephanie’s death I was in continuous grief counseling. I was tremendously lucky to be with Linda, whose work was concentrated in the area of homicide victim assistance. She went with me to every hearing, or else went in my place, and sat with my hand in hers throughout the trial. I needed one-on-one counseling on a twice-weekly basis for about a year, then weekly basis, and at the end of counseling I was seeing her once a month. I honestly believe I could not have made it without her help. The sense of knowing that I would only have to make it for a few days alone before I could once again talk it out and cry it out with this trained person spelled survival during those early days, weeks, months, and years. I can never give back what she gave, but I can try to pass on some of what I learned from her, at the same time remembering that what is necessary for survival is different for each one of us.

Following a session I would often stick on my refrigerator meaningful lines or phrases generated in the sessions. The longest-lasting piece, written in longhand by me on a yellow legal paper in 1993, is still there in the left-hand corner, magnetized to my new refrigerator as it was on the old one I owned when she was killed. “It happened. You cannot change it. It’s over.” It is vital that I be reminded of these thoughts each day because my mind goes back there to her last moments, her last thoughts, her last feelings and I cannot bear it until I remember that it is over and she is not still experiencing terror and torment. As Linda reminded me so often, these kinds of strokes remind me that I care about me. It is essential, because my psychology of it has not changed.

Recently I paid a visit to the same monastery where I spent the first two Christmases following my loss. I thought I had moved on to a different place in my grief journey, but I found myself in need of something this year. After searching within, I realized what I needed was a trip back there. It turned out to be the right thing. I might not go again or, on the other hand, I might find the need reappearing. This situation about the monastery ties in with another truth Linda stated a lot—that is, listen to your self, pay attention to how something feels and trust yourself and your instincts. I have found that this works for me about all of the time. If it doesn’t feel right I avoid it, if possible.

A laundry list of what helps me looks something like this:

- Music—A soothing balm from God.
- Exercise—I was running when she died (she was very proud that I had taken it up in my fifties), and something inside me said that I must keep on, that I would not survive if I quit running. I found that when I ran I felt just a bit “lighter,” the only time I had any reprise from the massive weight of grief I carried. Now I walk more than run and use weights for strengthening, but the psychology of it has not changed.
- Friends—Four or five have hung in with me, and we all know about the other who fell by the wayside because they could not handle our grief.
- Helping Others—I do this from the sidelines instead of one-to-one.
- Taking Care of Myself Emotionally—These kinds of strokes remind me that I care about me. It is essential, because my child, my parents and others wish that I have some surcease from sorrow—even, if possibly, some joy.
- Gift to Myself—I gave myself a sapphire ring, Stephanie’s birthstone, on Mother’s Day and Italian boots for Christmas.
- Say No—Whenever events and situations are not good for me or exactly what I want.
- God—He is last because He is above all and everything, even in those times when I have felt that I was hanging on by a fragile thread. He was there, is there, and will not leave. And He grieves with me. ☥
God, Thou Art Love

If I forget,
Yet God remembers! If these hands of mine
Cease from their clinging, yet the hands divine
Hold me so firmly that I cannot fall;
And if sometimes I am too tired to call
For Him to help me, then He reads the prayer
Unspoken in my heart, and lifts my care.

I dare not fear, since certainly I know
That I am in God’s keeping, shielded so
From all that else would harm, and in the hour
Of stern temptation strengthened by His power;
I tread no path in life to Him unknown;
I lift no burden, bear no pain, alone.
My soul a calm, sure hiding place has found:
The everlasting arms my life surround.

God, Thou art love! I build my faith on that.
I know Thee who has kept my path, and made
Light for me in the darkness, tempering sorrow
So that it reached me like a solemn joy;
It were too strange that I should doubt Thy love.

Birthday Tributes to Our Special Babies

Our beautiful daughter Alexa, this was to be your second birthday. How we wish you were here to blow out your candles and play with your birthday balloons with your cousins. Mommy and Daddy know that the angels in heaven are having quite a celebration for one of their most special angels.

Every day we long to hold you, to hear your baby laugh or even a cry, but we never heard your voice or saw the color of your eyes. I think that they were blue like your dad’s. You are and always will be daddy’s little girl. Mommy knows that you are around every time she sees or hears your name and smiles. How we miss you so.

Alexa, we will be together again. Until then you are our heart’s missing link. Happy second birthday sweetheart.

With all our love,
Mommy and Daddy

Happy 3rd Birthday My Little Dove!

Maria,

Mother’s day is bittersweet for us since this is your birthday. This year we had an addition to our family...making you a big sister too! Thank you for enriching our lives, feeling your constant presence and always being our guardian angel. Muchos besos mi niña...

Happy 5th B-day Garrett

To our son
I never thought the time would fly by as fast as it has. You would be starting pre-school this year with so many of your friends. Yet, many of the friends you now have up in heaven with you, we have met their moms and dads through M.E.N.D.

I think of the family stuff we do from day to day and how you would fit right in with what we are doing. I just wish I could see you grow up with your little sister, see you going on hunting and fishing trips with your dad.

Have a great birthday. We love you very much.

Remembering Grayson

Sorry I didn’t get to stay.
To laugh and run and play.
To be there by your side.
I’m sorry that I had to die.

God sent me down to be with you,
To make your loving hearts anew.
To help you look up and see
Both God and little me.

Mommy and Daddy, I wish I could stay.
Just like I heard you pray.
But, all the angels did cry
When you told little me goodbye.

God didn’t take me cause he’s mad,
He didn’t send me to make you sad.
But to give us both a chance to be
A love so precious ... don’t you see?

Up here no trouble do I see
And the pretty angels sing to me.
The streets of gold are where I play
You’ll come here too,
Mommy and Daddy, someday.

Until the day you join me here
I’ll love you Mommy and Daddy, dear.
Each breeze you feel and see,
Brings love and a kiss from me.

Precious David,

Your death – our deepest sorrow
Your life – our greatest joy;
Is it possible? You would be one
Today, my precious boy.

We’d probably be bringing out the cake;
It’s after noon.
I’d bounce you on my lap.
We’d sing “Happy Birthday to you.”

… 3:55 … The time has come
When we saw you face to face.
But you did not look back, my son.
You had entered heaven’s gates.

And now I ache to hold you
And whisper in your ear,
“I love you, David, my darling son.
Happy first birthday, my dear.”

What fun we would be having!
You’d have us laughing with your charm.
And yet I cannot hold you,
For Jesus has you in His arms.

And though we mourn your death, my boy,
We celebrate your life,
While longing for that glorious day
When all shall be made right.

On that day, we’ll meet again.
How happy we will be!
Though we’ll have lost a lifetime,
We’ll have gained eternity.

Love,
Mommy and Daddy

HAPPY BIRTHDAY, AUSTIN JEREMIAH

Hello Baby Austin. It has been seven years since we saw your handsome little chubby face, your round head, your ten fingers and ten toes that were so perfectly formed in every way. Even on the top of your little hands, I even saw the dimples on your chubby knuckles. I still wonder how and why did such a tragic thing happen to my baby. Austin, I still think about that day I just casually walked into the doctor's office for my final appointment...telling everyone there that I would be induced for labor the next day. Little did I know that Dr. Carlos would tell me, “Dana, I hear NO heartbeat.” I thought to myself; This can not be happening to me, I just was in the office a week ago and I heard your heartbeat. I thought again, crying madly, I'm supposed to have a live and healthy baby boy to bring home to my family this week. Austin, this was the saddest day of my life. As time goes by I now know that God thought differently about your life. He wanted you to be there with him in heaven. Austin, you know that Ashley, Arren, Daddy and I talk or speak your name daily. You are a big part of our family, our only son and brother. We will never tuck you away in a drawer or a closet to never have you mentioned again. We will see you again one day—this is my promise to you—and I will then hold you again as I held you that Tuesday morning, September 16th.

With all our love, your family: Tracy, Dana, Ashley & Arren Davis

Happy 2nd Birthday to Our Littlest Angel, Laiken Riley Madison Kale

Happy Birthday sweet boy!!!! In some ways, it seems like it was just yesterday you were here with us, but in other ways, it seems like such a long time ago. We miss you so much. I hope you have a fun birthday- mommy and daddy wish we were there to see you blow out your candles. Know that we love you. Happy Birthday little one.

Love,
Mommy and Daddy

Happy Birthday to Our Littlest Angel, Laiken Riley Madison Kale

In my mind I can see what you would now look like
At two years old
Blonde hair, big brown eyes, and long eyelashes
Like your brothers
Wearing pink with bare wiggly toes
Dancing and twirling in the cool grass
Smiling up at me and melting my heart all over again
I wish my heart could feel what my mind sees
Instead of the awful pain and emptiness of Losing you.

We love you and miss you so very much, Princess.

Love, Mommy, Daddy, big sister Arianna, big brother Jarod, and baby brother Gavin

Parents’ Lament

Our dear and precious child, what words can we
Bestow that sum a lifetime ne’er to share!
Through hurt and loss which nothing can compare,
We mourn the memories that ne’er shall be.

For months we lived a love that swelled our hearts
Beyond their leveed banks. We dreamed, planned, hoped,
And prayed that your delivery would start
A union Christ, Himself, would envelop.

Now, lace-adorned clothes, silent cribs and toys,
And infant death’s cold hand revoke our joy.
Cherished child, we are grateful God joined us
This fleeting moment; our love harbour’d will Ne’er fade. Serve Christ with radiance ‘til
We join you in God’s heavenly chorus.

"At my first defense, no one came to my support, but everyone deserted me. May it not be held against them. But the Lord stood at my side and gave me strength..."

2 Timothy 4:16-17

“You don't live in a world all alone. Your brothers are here too.”

Albert Schweitzer

Will there really be a "Morning"?
Is there such a thing as "Day"?
Could I see it from the mountains
If I were as tall as they?

Has it feet like Water lilies?
Has it feathers like a Bird?
Is it brought from famous countries
Of which I have never heard?

Oh some Scholar! Oh some Sailor!
Oh some Wise Men from the skies!
Please to tell a little Pilgrim
Where the place called "Morning" lies!

Tom Thumb Community Bucks

Help M.E.N.D. by collecting Tom Thumb Community Bucks this fall. For every $50 you spend on groceries, Tom Thumb will give you a community buck that is printed at the time of check-out and handed to you with your receipt and in-store coupons. At the end of the program mail all your bucks to M.E.N.D. We will then turn them in to the corporate office and will receive a gift card that will help us purchase refreshments for our annual Christmas Ceremony. Thanks for your help!

M.E.N.D. Fundraisers
As a non-profit organization M.E.N.D. is funded solely by private donations and fundraisers. Any assistance you can give us by participating in any or all of these fundraisers is greatly appreciated.

Kroger grocery stores donate a percentage of all purchases of those shoppers who have and use a Kroger Share Card back to M.E.N.D. To obtain your Share Card, contact Rebekah via one of the ways listed on the last page of this newsletter and let her know how many you need. This program is valid in Texas, but residents of other states may need to check with store managers to see if they participate.

Tom Thumb also has a program in Texas that can benefit M.E.N.D. If you have a Tom Thumb Reward Card, please ask your Tom Thumb cashier to link your card with M.E.N.D. Our number is 6265. If you are already linked to another organization, they will split a donation of one percent of your purchases between the organizations. It only takes about five minutes to get a Reward Card, and it can also be used at Randalls and Simon David stores.

Stamps.com offers a $10-$20 referral program. If you would like to purchase stamps from home and receive a free postage scale, visit www.stamps.com, and use referral code C-4FTJ-TWR. Stamps.com will give the incentive money to M.E.N.D. in the form of free postage. Shannon Outen, a M.E.N.D. member and co-owner of Paper Patch, represents several lines of business stationary, specializing in customized holiday/Christmas cards at a discounted price. Shannon will donate 10 percent of her profits to M.E.N.D. from each Christmas card order. Contact Shannon at (817) 557-4733 or email outencs@aol.com to receive a current catalogue.

Christine Oxendine is now a representative of Avon. She has offered to give 10 percent of any orders placed by M.E.N.D. members. To receive a catalogue, contact Christine at 940-381-6617 home or 682-365-7448 cell or e-mail bearpals@charter.net.

Glenn Martin is looking for families willing to grant space for small gumball machines in order to raise funds for M.E.N.D. If you have a retail business or connections to a high traffic location, like a restaurant, and are willing to place a gumball machine in your location, Glenn will place, stock, and service the equipment and give M.E.N.D. 35 percent of the proceeds. His business has most of its route in the Grapevine and Southlake areas and could travel further into the Dallas/Fort Worth metroplex for a high traffic location. Glenn can be contacted at (817) 874-5366 or glmartin@att.net.

M.E.N.D. can now earn funds through i.think inc., an online marketing research firm. You can help by signing up as a survey panel member and designating us as the recipient of your fee. Every time you complete a survey M.E.N.D. will be automatically credited. Go to the website at http://www.ithinkinc.com and choose “Sign up to become an i.think inc. panel member” Fill out the sign-up survey. Under the “Funds for Charity” section, select M.E.N.D. from the list of names. Once you have completed the sign-up survey, including a valid email address, you’ll be contacted with an Internet address and password for specific surveys for you to take part in. At the end of the survey, press the “Submit” button, and M.E.N.D. will be automatically credited as the recipient of all money you have earned.
