WHISKEY FLIGHTS

Something in the Water

Ask anyone from Kentucky and they'll tell you that bourbon from Kentucky is far superior to bourbon from the rest of the country. They attribute it to the limestone fortified water that you find in Kentucky and water is an essential ingredient in bourbon. The allegiance to limestone water isn't just superstition. It has a high pH, which promotes fermentation. The limestone adds minerals, like calcium. It filters out impurities, most importantly iron, which gives liquor a bad taste.

Bat Masteron's

Gambler, buffalo hunter, army scout, gunfighter and newspaperman, William "Bat" Masterson did it all and did it well. And what better way to honor such a rarefied man than with a truly exceptional whiskey. Crafted by artisans, distilled in a pot still and aged in white-oak casks for just over 10 years, it's the kind of drink that Bat would've surely raved about.
