GRAPPA

Grappa is a distilled spirit made from the “soul of the grape.” Nothing could be more foreign to the American palate than Grappa, the Italian Brandy distilled from grape skins, stems, seeds & remaining juices left over from the wine making process. By tradition Grappa IS a poor man’s drink & can pistol-whip the palate of the neophyte. Rustic, often fiery, it smells of hay, earth & God knows what else. Today, top winemakers & distillers from Italy, & the world over, artfully craft their Grappas, often distilling them from a single grape variety, or even a single variety from a single designated vineyard. Some are aged in oak from anywhere from six months to a year, possibly more. The result is a smoother, more insinuating product that can be downright elegant, while still retaining the spirit’s primary characteristics. Grappa has intensity, a pristine quality & an underlying simplicity. It’s strong, but it leaves the taste buds refreshed.

Best enjoyed after a fabulous dinner!
