What Cannot Be Killed or Swept Aside: Love

I don’t know what disturbs me more: the reality that our nation and world are gripped in a fist of violence, hatred, blame and rage—or the reality that when I heard about yet another massacre on Sunday, this time in Orlando, I experienced feelings inside my own heart of violence, hatred, blame and rage. Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn summed us up well: “If only there were evil people somewhere insidiously committing evil deeds, and it were necessary only to separate them from the rest of us and destroy them. But the line dividing good and evil cuts through the heart of every human being.”

It seems we’re all caught in this dark, gooey web. What’s more, we keep choosing to be caught. Every one of us. No exceptions.

And yet.

There is a Presence. A reality more powerful than any human force we could name or imagine. We can’t dissect it or explain it. But when it appears, instinctively we turn, like meerkats, toward its warmth.

Just hours after the horrific events in Orlando, it’s no surprise that Lin-Manuel Miranda’s acceptance speech at the Tony Awards immediately went viral. Miranda, whose Broadway musical Hamilton earned eleven Tony awards, accepted his own for Best Score, not with a speech but with an audacious sonnet of hope:

…we live through times when hate and fear seem stronger. We rise and fall and light from dying embers. Remembrances that hope and love last longer. And love is love is love is love is love is love cannot be killed or swept aside.

Miranda’s words echo another audacious proclamation:

Love…bears all things, believes all things, hopes all things, endures all things. Love never ends... And now faith, hope and love abide, these three; and the greatest of these is love.

The Apostle Paul knew something about God’s kind of love: We can mock it, ignore it, reject it, threaten it, torture it, shoot it and/or nail it to a cross. We can actually kill the love of God…but we cannot defeat it. Love will keep coming back for us. It will keep pursuing us and forgiving us and inviting to come out of death and into life.
What Cannot Be Killed or Swept Aside: Love (continued from page 1)

Love is what God is.
Love is why Christ came.
Love is what the Church must be and do.
No exceptions.

Season of Prayer Verse: Inspired by Psalm 42 and 43

Come, all you whose souls thirst for the living God. We come in search of help and hope.
Come, you who are acquainted with grief or oppression. We come bearing our doubts, our wounds, and our fears.
Come, you who are in need of good news. We come in search of joy, truth, and light.
Come and find refuge in God your rock. Let us again praise the One who is our help and our hope.

Johenning Baptist Community Center Event: July 30

Coordinator and Volunteers Needed!
First Baptist Church of D.C. has been invited to host another event at the Johenning Baptist Community Center in late July. This event gives FBCDC the opportunity to fellowship with our friends in Southeast DC, organize games for children and provide a meal at the time of the month when resources for residents are stretched. In order to be able to answer this request, we need a coordinator to organize the event. Would one or two people like to lead the event? Would others like to volunteer? It will take a volunteer group of about 15-to-20 people broken up into four teams. If you are interested in coordinating or serving at this event, please contact Dinh Tran at dinhtran0430@gmail.com.

Diane Bish Recital Wows Enthusiastic Audience

The fiery red outfit Diane Bish wore for the first half of her recital was an indication of the fireworks to come. Her performance wowed an exuberant audience, some of whom came from as far away as Peru, Indiana (birthplace of famed composer Cole Porter) and Greenville, South Carolina. Miss Bish, known as “The First Lady of the Organ,” included works by Bach, Tournamire and Elgar in her program, and the audience sang two verses of “All Creatures of Our God and King” during her own composition of “Introduction, Theme and Variations on Lasst Uns Erefuen.” A festive reception followed in Fellowship Hall, where Miss Bish greeted her fans and signed CD’s and music scores. Thanks to all involved for making the event run smoothly.
