With Ed Pruden
While Charlie and Alyssa were in Atlanta, Pastor Julie flew to Portland, OR to be with our sisters and brothers of the American Baptist Convention.

The pastoral staff is thankful for the good folks of First Baptist for letting us attend these conferences and connect with other faith leaders. Now, we are ready for a good nap and down time in our city with our people.

BAPTIST WORLD ALLIANCE ELECTS NEW GENERAL SECRETARY

American Elijah Brown was elected to be the next general secretary of the BWA at the gathering in Bangkok, Thailand, July 2-7, where approximately 300 Baptist leaders, pastors, theologians, seminary presidents, professors and interested (CONTINUED ON PAGE 6)
It was a dreary Sunday afternoon about 40 years ago. I was driving a 1971 Volkswagen Beetle home from college in the rain. Suddenly, the engine simply gave out. I opened the engine compartment and immediately saw the culprit. The sprocket for the generator belt had split in two.

I knew I wasn’t going anywhere like that, so I waded across a wet freeway median to make my way back to the nearest town – about fifteen miles away. I suspected I would be spending the night there and trying to figure out how to get my car fixed on Monday. Remember, this was back in the dark ages before cell phones. Here was my challenge: How was I going to get to the nearest town and then pay for a hotel room and for car repairs?

Just down the road there were two 18-wheelers stopped to check their tires. I asked one of them for a ride and he declined. But he told me the other driver would give me a ride and he did. Fifteen miles later, I was dropped off on the side of the freeway and climbed a wet and slippery hill toward a service station.

The service station didn’t have a mechanic, but they directed me to a guy who ran a towing service. The tow driver picked me up, drove me to my car and we headed back to the town – probably a 40-mile trip all together. During conversation, the driver told me he had a friend who was a Volkswagen mechanic. He took me directly to the mechanic’s house – on a Sunday afternoon. The mechanic had the right part, repaired my car, and I was back on my way home.

I ended up getting home just a few hours late and only a few dollars poorer. All because three total strangers gave gifts to a stranger in their midst.

Taking care of the needs of someone you’ve never met: that’s hospitality.
Contemplative Grounding for Healing the World
Margaret Benefiel, PhD.
Executive Director, The Shalem Institute, Washington, D.C.

“Marches. Online petitions. Letters to the editor. Am I doing any good? I ask myself. Am I making a difference? Is there another way? In the face of injustice, wars, and humanity’s inhumanity to humanity, I long to be faithful to doing my part to heal the world. This session will focus on contemplative grounding for healing the world.”

Margaret became executive director of the Shalem Institute in July 2015. Prior to coming to Shalem, she ran her own consulting, speaking, training, and coaching business, Executive Soul, helping leaders and organizations nurture their souls and express their deepest values institutionally. At the same time, she taught as adjunct faculty at Andover Newton Theological School in the area of contemplative leadership. Margaret is a Quaker and holds a B.A. in History from Princeton University, an M.A. in Mathematics from Portland State University, an M.A. in Theology from Earlham School of Religion, and a PhD in Spirituality from Catholic University of America. She has written extensively on various aspects of contemplative leadership and spirituality at work, including The Soul of Supervision; The Soul of a Leader: Finding Your Path to Fulfillment and Success; and Soul at Work: Spiritual Leadership in Organizations.

Christians and Muslims in Relationship
Rev. Steven D. Martin, Director of Communications and Development,
National Council of Churches USA

"After I made my first film in 2001 entitled, "Muslims in Appalachia," I have been concerned with the beautiful people that make up the Muslim community, both their rich life and culture, and the dangers they face as America becomes more anxious. In this session I will bring my perspective on my experiences with Muslims around the world and how the teachings of Jesus have shaped my work with this community."

Steven has served United Methodist Churches as pastor for twenty years and is a graduate of Candler School of Theology. He brings his expertise in theology, the intersection of faith and politics, and media production to bear upon today's most challenging problems. He has produced several films for public television, including Muslims in Appalachia; Islam in America After September 11th; Theologians Under Hitler; God With US: Baptism and the Jews in the Third Reich; Elisabeth of Berlin; and most recently, Islam in America: The Christian Truth. His writing has appeared in America's top national media outlets including the Washington Post and USA Today. He speaks frequently at churches, seminaries, and conventions across the US.

Religious Liberty Based on Compassion
Charles Watson Jr.
Baptist Joint Committee for Religious Liberty

"My theology didn’t have an answer for why children were dying. As a chaplain intern at Children's Hospital of Atlanta, I wept, prayed and mourned with families at the lowest point of their lives. I learned that the pain didn’t care about the religion of the family, but that their faith was sometimes their only hope. In this session I will explain why compassion should compel us all to be religious liberty advocates."

Charles Watson Jr. is the Education and Outreach Specialist of the Baptist Joint Committee for Religious Liberty in Washington, D.C. His work is focused on expanding the base of support for religious liberty and engaging the next generation of advocates. A graduate of The Citadel, Watson earned a Master of Divinity degree at Mercer University’s McAfee School of Theology. He previously served as the Children’s Director of Buckhead Baptist Church in Atlanta and as a hospice chaplain resident, endorsed by the Cooperative Baptist Fellowship. Watson is a veteran of the United States Air Force.

Baptists from more than 40 countries met for worship, fellowship, study and decision meetings.

Brown will assume the position on January 1, 2018, succeeding Neville Callam who retires in December after more than 10 years of service. Callam, who is from Jamaica, is the first black person and the first who is neither an American nor a European to lead the BWA. A luncheon in Callam’s honor will take place October 21, 2017 at Memorial Baptist Church in Arlington.

During the 5-day gathering, the BWA passed resolutions expressing concerns on human slavery and sex trafficking, refugees in East Africa, the humanitarian crisis in Venezuela and religious liberty in both Russia and the United States. Regarding the U.S., the BWA said "the current travel ban on residents of several Muslim-majority nations" to the United States "raised serious concerns about religious freedom" and that "the BWA believes that no law should be used to discriminate on the basis of religion." The BWA urged President Trump and the government of the US to affirm our country’s "historic commitment to religious freedom for all people." The body encouraged Baptists in the US "to understand the implications of religious discrimination and to stand firm for cherished Baptist principles of religious liberty."

Founded in 1905, the BWA is a fellowship of 238 conventions and unions in 124 countries and territories comprising 45 million members in 177,000 churches. Its priorities are nurturing the passion for mission and evangelism; promoting worship, fellowship and unity; responding to people in need; defending human rights and justice; and advancing relevant theological reflection.

LeDayne became BPFNA’s Executive Director in 2015, having served the organization in a variety of roles since 1998. A life-long Carolinian, she is a graduate of Furman University in Greenville, where her commitment to issues of peace and justice began. She received an M.Div. in 1993 from the Divinity School at Duke University in Durham, NC, and was ordained in Durham at Watts Street Baptist Church. LeDayne and her husband, Tom, a professor of mathematics at Winthrop University, are active members of Park Road Baptist Church in Charlotte.

Pastor to Serve on BTSR Board
In March of this year, Pastor Julie was elected to serve as a trustee of the Baptist Theological Seminary at Richmond (BTSR). Her three year term begins this Sunday afternoon at a retreat in New Boston, VA, with new BTSR president, Linda McKinnish Bridges (returning to D.C. Monday night).

BTSR was formed in 1991 in celebration of historic Baptist values.
