Monographs

2016    Sparing Civilians. Oxford: Oxford University Press.
Review excerpts:

"Seth Lazar has emerged as one of the most potent voices in contemporary ethics of war. In this short, indispensable, book he provides a compelling defence of the principle of Moral Distinction… There are many illuminating discussions of central issues in Just War Theory, all delivered in Lazar's lucid and compact prose which is a joy to read… this is a hugely important book that will shape the debate on civilian immunity for years to come." David Rodin, Australasian Journal of Philosophy.

"This book will make a difference in the future of just war theory. It is an important challenge to the basic assumptions of the leading contemporary just war theorists, and it is an indictment against their starting points. It is well written and its readability is enhanced by its avoidance of the technical language of most contemporary discussions of just war theory. The author can avoid technical and specialist language because his challenge is at a primitive level, factually and maybe logically prior to the level of most contemporary work in the field. Moreover, this book is innovative concerning how to do applied ethics more generally. Everyone in ethics will be interested in the author's discussions of opportunistic vs. eliminative killing in Chapter 3 and the thought experiments in his discussion of risk in Chapter 4." Peter Tramel, Notre Dame Philosophical Reviews.

"Seth Lazar's Sparing Civilians is the first book-length philosophical defense of the principle [of Noncombatant Immunity], and thus is a timely contribution to the debate on just war. Timeliness, however, is not the only quality of the book. The volume provides an innovative defense of one of the central tenets of just war, offering a set of compelling arguments that draw on some of the most sophisticated tools of contemporary moral and political philosophy. The picture that emerges is a powerful one. Moreover, the book is a pleasure to read. Lazar displays a remarkable capacity to formulate some of the most complex issues in contemporary just war theory in a clear and accessible way…. The central ideas of Lazar's book are powerful and important. I expect them to have a significant impact on how the philosophical debate on just war will develop in the coming years. As they should." Massimo Renzo, Ethics.

"Throughout, Lazar's arguments are novel, ingenious, and frequently convincing (not to mention numerous). In fact… Lazar somewhat undersells the book's contribution. Though billed as a focussed defence of civilian immunity, the book provides some of the key materials for a markedly different way of approaching the justification of war (and the use of force more generally)… Sparing Civilians is a superb book which deserves to be taken very seriously." Jonathan Parry, Philosophical Review.

Grants

External Grants

2021    ARC Future Fellowship (FT21) Award — AUD1,020,698
'Automatic Authorities: Charting a Course for Legitimate AI'. Sole CI. Start of project expected mid-2022. This project aims to develop novel theories of power and its justification, and apply them to the use of AI by state and non-state actors to exercise power.

2019    Templeton World Charity Foundation 'Diverse Intelligences' Grant — USD234,000
'Moral Skill and Artificial Intelligence'. Project Director. With Co-Director Claire Benn, and CIs Jenny Davis, Toni Erskine, Colin Klein. This project will ask whether outsourcing morally weighted decisions to automated systems can lead to 'moral deskilling', and whether there are ways to design automated systems so that they make us better, not worse, at exercising moral judgment.

2016    ARC Discovery Project Award (DP17) — AUD335,000
'Ethics and Risk'. Lead CI. Other CIs and PIs: Lara Buchak (Berkeley); Katie Steele (ANU); Alan Hájek (ANU); Frank Jackson (ANU); Philip Pettit (ANU).

2013    ARC Discovery Early Career Research Award (DE13) — AUD366,000
'Justifying War'. Sole CI.

05-08   Arts and Humanities Research Council, Doctoral Fellowship — GBP60,000
