Downtown Asheville's new "street food": Baba Nahm gives us quick, wholesome food on-the-go.

Content:

The Asheville community is about to get a new taste of the Mediterranean. Baba Nahm is simple, delicious food with a boisterous spirit, though the real spirit of this place lies in its creators — passionate, food-driven chefs whose aim with this new concept is to provide a quick-trip, high energy food place for on-the-go goodness. And that's exactly what you'll get at Baba Nahm.

Centered around Middle Eastern culture — with tons of flavor and bright colors to match the upbeat vibe of the space — Baba Nahm is a full sensory experience. Specialties include vibrant salads, falafel, and spit-roasted lamb and chicken. The food is rooted in tradition, using fresh, local ingredients as often as possible.

Baba Nahm is intended as a grab-and-go spot, but it still has a warm, community feel. The space will include a shareable table for those who want to stay and enjoy their food. And ultimately, the food is what's at the heart of Baba Nahm; it's convenient and nutritious, with a bit of play sprinkled in — a combo that's pretty tough to come by.

Baba Nahm will be opening its doors soon in The Grove Arcade building.
