NEW BOOKS ON QUAKER HISTORY

November 2005

Adelaide Darby was the second daughter of Francis Darby and Hannah (née Grant). She was raised a Quaker, but later joined the Church of England. She married Henry Whitmore, M.P. for Bridgnorth, Shropshire.

Emma Lapsansky-Werner: curator of the Haverford Quaker Collection and Haverford College faculty member.

Contains information on Quaker activities by geographic region.

Also known as Miami Valley College after November 2nd, 1874 and, from 1881 to 1883, Miami Valley College Training School. Includes a history of Quaker involvement in education in Warren County, Ohio, with a special focus on Waynesville, Ohio.

Emma Lapsanksy-Werner: Curator of the Haverford Quaker Collection and Haverford College faculty member.

This catalogue accompanies the exhibition of the same name, presented at the Timken Museum of Art, November 5, 2004-February 27, 2005.

Includes references to Chester County antislavery movements. John Cox (d. 1880) and Hannah Pierce Cox (1797-1876) were Quakers.

Henderson Luelling, who transported, propagated, and dispersed the first grafted fruit trees in the American Far West, was a farmer whose life was chiefly devoted to the care of fruiting plants. His ardent Quaker righteousness, abolitionism, Underground Railroad activities, political organizing, and commercial pioneering were personal achievements of considerable historical interest.

Based on the 1714 edition.

Journal and transactions of the exiles, citizens of Philadelphia, sent to Winchester, Virginia. from 2nd September, 1777, to 30 April, 1778

Includes discussion of the Quaker Atlantic.

Contains selected narratives from the two most important contemporary chroniclers of the Underground Railroad, Levi Coffin and William Still.

"Wildcat" was the Hunn family homestead located near Dover, Delaware.

King, Thomas M. San Jose Quakers, West Coast Friends. [Santa Rosa, Calif.: T.M. King], 2004-2005.

Hugh Borton was Haverford College president, 1957-1967.

Hannah Whitall Smith was a birthright Quaker. She left the Society of Friends around 1860. Explores the personal communications of Hannah Whitall Smith, author of the popular Christian classic, The Christian's Secret of a Happy Life (1875). She was a Holiness preacher, and temperance activist.

Thomas Garrett was a Quaker.

Early members of the Boren family were Quakers, including the founding mother, Phebe Beeson Boren (1776/77-1816).

  * Includes a glossary of medical terms and treatments.
  * Contains references to Philadelphia Quakers.

  * Autobiography of Anne Ord, a British Quaker pacifist.

  * Recalls the Hicksite/Orthodox separation and the reunification of Philadelphia area Quakers.

  * Pocono Lake Preserve was founded by Quakers (Isaac Sharpless and Joseph Elkinton), and offered hospitality to members of the Orthodox branch of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting for many years.
  * Isaac Sharpless was president of Haverford College, 1887 to 1917.

  * Includes references to Quakers.
Putala, Claire White. Reading and Writing Ourselves Into Being: the Literacy of Certain Nineteenth-Century Young Women. Greenwich, Conn.: Information Age Pub., 2004. Includes references to Quakers Anna Folger Coffin, Ellen Wright Garrison, Martha Mott Lord, Lucretia Coffin Mott, Marianna Pelham Mott, Thomas Mott, David Munson Osborne, Eliza Wright Osborne, David Wright, and Martha Coffin Wright. Includes concise Wright/Mott/Osborne genealogy.

Some eight generations of craftspeople, engineers, and industrialists descended from Samuel Sellers—a Quaker wire weaver who arrived in Pennsylvania in 1682—offer a window into the origins, growth, and decline of the industrial metropolis [Philadelphia].

Horace Alexander was a British Quaker scientist, ornithologist, and author of many books on Gandhi and India.

---

Reprinted Works

This reprint was originally transcribed from a 19th century reprint of Barclay's collected works, Truth Triumphant (Philadelphia: Benjamin C. Stanton, 1831) vol. 1, p. 235-252, and was corrected against the first edition of the same collection, published by Thomas Northcott in 1692.

Elizabeth Lea (1793-1858) was a Quaker living in Sandy Spring, Maryland and in Delaware.

Genealogical Works

Early members of this family were founders of the Pennsylvania Yearly Meeting of Progressive Friends.

Includes information about Thomas Garrett (1789-1871).