ABOUT

Founded in 2016 by choreographer Jeremy McQueen, THE BLACK IRIS PROJECT is a ballet collaborative and education vehicle which creates new, relevant classical ballet works that celebrate diversity and Black history. Based in New York City, the project hosts a team of predominantly BLACK artists capable of delivering cross-discipline and wholly original works. Championing individuality, the collaborative harnesses the Black community’s inherent creative spirit to encourage and inspire youth of color to pursue art, movement and music as an expressive outlet and a means for collective healing.

In its inaugural year, THE BLACK IRIS PROJECT has been awarded funding from the Rockefeller Brothers Fund, New Music USA and CUNY Dance Initiative, with additional support from the Harlem School of the Arts, Nude Barre & Shea Moisture. The Black Iris Project has been featured in The New York Times, The Village Voice, Huffington Post, Blavity, A Plus, Jet Magazine, Dance Informa, Dance Magazine, NY1 and Broadway World.

INSPIRATION

Three years ago when my mother was battling cancer, I took a trip to the Metropolitan Museum of Art where I first fell in love with Georgia O’Keeffe’s painting, Black Iris III. Sparked with inspiration from the painting, my mom’s struggles and the strength of other black women who helped raise me, started creating my first en pointe ballet. Despite trials and tribulation, “Black Iris” came to life at Joffrey Ballet in March 2013 and birthed new ideas about how we could take greater steps as a community to diversify the dialogue within classical ballet. Then a year ago a brand new classical score about Nelson Mandela’s life (written by a Black composer) fell in my lap and I knew what I needed to do—create classical ballets that are rooted in black culture, with black artistic visionaries, performed by diverse dancers, AND take these ballets into minority communities, enabling the artists to give back and inspire.

THE BLACK IRIS PROJECT is all parts people, places and experiences, and follows a trajectory alongside a lifespan of joy, education, family, trials and disappointments. We invite you to join our journey.

—JEREMY MCQUEEN
Black Iris was commissioned by the Joffrey Academy of Dance, Official School of The Joffrey Ballet and premiered on March 10, 2013 in Chicago, IL.

“The challenge of Black womanhood is a unique specificity. This piece [Black Iris] attempts to trace those challenges found in life, work, and even ballet, while also pulling from the specific strengths needed to “carry-on.” I dedicate this work to Mary McQueen, Ann Tinsley, and Beverly Anderson, three Black women who exemplify the perseverance, determination, confidence, and faith that is distinctively Black and woman. To them I offer, Black Iris.”

AARON DIEHL
Composer
BROWN BABY

Pianist, Aaron Diehl, is one of the most sought after jazz virtuosos, consistently playing with what The New York Times describes as “melodic precision, harmonic erudition, and, elegant restraint.” Diehl’s meticulously thought-out performances, collaborations, and compositions are a leading force in today’s generation of jazz contemporaries, spearheading a distinct union of traditional and fresh artistry. Diehl’s new album on Mack Avenue Records, Space, Time, Continuum, emphasizes the artistic collaborations between generations. Establishing the jazz language as a continuum unifying artists, the album includes performances by NEA Jazz Master Benny Golson (tenor saxophone) and Duke Ellington Orchestra alumni Joe Temperley (baritone saxophone), alongside Diehl’s other established trio—Quincy Davis (drums) and David Wong (bass). The majority of the album consists of Diehl’s original compositions. The title track, featuring vocalist Charenee Wade, was co-written by Cécile McLorinSalvant. Aaron Diehl is a graduate of the Juilliard School, where he studied with Kenny Barron, Eric Reed, and Oxana Yablonskaya. Residing in Harlem, he enjoys spending time in the sky when he isn’t on tour or recording.

NELSON MANDELA

ROLIHHLA MANDELA was born into the Madiba clan in Mvezo, Transkei, on 18 July 1918. His mother was Nonqaphi Nosekeni and his father, Nkosi Mphakanyiswa Gadla Mandela, was the main advisor to the Acting King of the Thembu people, Jongintaba Dalindyebo. He received the name “Nelson” on his first day in primary school from his teacher Miss Mdingane. When he was 12 his father died and he was raised by the Regent at the Great Place in Mqhekezweni. He was sent to the best schools available and began studying a BA at Fort Hare University. When he was expelled for joining a student protest, the Regent told him to return or get married. So he ran away to Johannesburg with his cousin Justice. His first job in 1941 was as a security guard on a gold mine and then as a legal clerk in the law firm Witkin, Edelman and Sidelsky. At the same time he completed his BA through Unisa. In 1943 he enrolled for an LLB at Wits University. He was a poor student and became more involved in politics from 1944 after he helped to start the ANC Youth League. He married in the same year and needed money to support his family.

By mid-1952 when the university asked him to pay the 27 pounds he owed or leave, he already had three children. He only started studying again in 1962 in prison. He finally graduated with an LLB through Unisa 27 years later.

Later in 1952 he became the National Volunteer-in-Chief of the Defiance Campaign against apartheid laws. He and 19 others were later charged and sentenced to nine months, suspended for two years. In August he and Oliver Tambo started South Africa's first black law firm, Mandela & Tambo. In those days one could practise as an attorney with a two-year diploma. Later that year he was banned for the first time—he had to ask the government for permission whenever he needed to leave Johannesburg. After the adoption of the Freedom Charter in 1955, 156 people were arrested and charged with treason. The trial lasted four-and-a-half years until 29 March 1961 by which time all were acquitted. The ANC and PAC were banned after the 21 March 1961 killing by police of 69 unarmed protesters in Sharpeville.

Mandela called on the government not to turn South Africa into a republic on 31 May 1961 but to discuss a non-racial constitution. He was ignored so he called for a strike on 29, 30 and 31 March. In June 1961 he was asked to lead the ANC's armed wing, Umkhonto weSizwe and it launched on 16 December that year. On 11 January 1962, Mandela secretly left South Africa to undergo military training and to get support from African countries for the armed struggle. He was arrested on 5 August and charged with leaving the country illegally and encouraging the strike. He was convicted and sentenced on 7 November 1962 to five years in prison.

On 11 July 1963, a secret hideout he once used was raided by police. On 9 October 1963 he joined 10 others on trial for sabotage in the Rivonia Trial. On 12 June 1964 he and seven others were sentenced to life imprisonment. While he was in prison his mother and his eldest son died. He was not allowed to attend their funerals.

He spent 18 years on Robben Island, and while at Pollsmoor Prison in Cape Town in 1985 he had to go to hospital. When Justice Minister Kobie Coetsee visited him, he had an idea: to see if the government wanted to talk about one day meeting with the ANC.

In 1988 he was taken to hospital for tuberculosis. Three months later he was moved to Victor Verster Prison where he spent his last 14 months in prison. He was released on Sunday 11 February 1990, nine days after the unbanning of the ANC and the PAC.

Other political prisoners were freed and exiles returned. The ANC began talking to the government about South Africa's future. For this work he and President FW de Klerk won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1993, and on 27 April 1994, Mandela voted in South Africa's first democratic elections.

On 10 May 1994, he was inaugurated as South Africa's first democratically elected President and stepped down after one term. In his retirement he worked on building schools and clinics, highlighting HIV, children and leadership. He died at his home in Johannesburg on 5 December 2013.
BEATRICE REYNOLDS COX

BEATRICE REYNOLDS COX, was born Beatrix Hacker in Munich, West Germany in November 1953. One of 5,000 post WWII babies called Mischlingskinder (mixed-race children) by Europeans and “Brown Babies” by Americans, she was among the few that knew both parents. Her African American father, Army Master Sargent Eugene Reynolds moved her German mother Elizabeth Hacker to his hometown of Flint, MI following their October 1955 marriage in Toledo, OH. Now ensconced in the US home of her American father, the future seemed bright for Beatrice and her German mother. However fate soon intervened and presented Beatrice with a series of challenges that resulted in a lifelong series of daunting highs and lows.

Tragically, only two weeks after the wedding, her father died in a Wyoming airplane crash while returning to his duty station in Hawaii. Her German speaking mother was left to live in an all black neighborhood with in-laws she scarcely knew and in a country of whose customs and culture she knew nothing. Her mother was also pregnant with Beatrice’s sister at the time of the crash. Beatrice attended the all black Clark Elementary School before being confronted with the challenge of integrating the all white Pierce Elementary School in 1963. After graduating from Central High School in 1971, Beatrice took advantage of the country’s new Affirmative Action laws and graduated with a degree in fashion merchandising and retailing from Western Michigan University in 1975.

She moved to San Francisco in 1976 to pursue a career in retail management. Then in 1977 she launched a lucrative long term modeling career working for well known agencies such as Wilhelmmina (New York & Los Angeles), Look (San Francisco), Talent and KD Modele (Germany). Some of her credits include Saks 5th Avenue, Esprit, Jessica McClintock/ Gunne Sak, Ultra Sheen and Ebony & Essence Magazines.

In 1978 she married her dentist husband whose assignment to the U S Army Dental Corps took her back to her birth country. They resided in Stuttgart, Germany where they pursued their promising careers and welcomed the arrival of daughter Lauren. Upon their return to northern California, Beatrice multitasked as Operating Manager of her husband’s practice, earned a Bachelor’s Degree in Anthropology while modeling worldwide, parenting Lauren and her newly arrived brother Phillip while introducing both children to the modeling profession.

Beatrice earned her Master’s Degree in Cultural Resource Management from Sonoma State University and is now a Registered Professional Archaeologist. Her thesis, Negotiating the System in Jim Crow America, the Archaeology of the Allensworth Hotel, could well serve as her personal anthem. Triumphing over adversity has become her hallmark as she continues to share her life lessons. She has focused on the public interpretation of archaeological sites, led the creation of interpretive materials of the Afro-Mestizo Juana Briones site in San Francisco’s Presidio and volunteered as a resource specialist with various schools and philanthropic organizations.

A former member of The Links, Inc. Ms. Cox is a Project Manager for an environmental consulting firm in Northern California where she resides pursuing her interests in gardening, history, travel and supporting music and dance arts.

BROWN BABY IS INSPIRED BY THE LIFE OF MODEL BEATRICE REYNOLDS COX AND HER LOVING FAMILY.
Chaos surrounds her
The pretty darky
In a wedge of vicious swans
Poor Child Woman She
Dancing a beautiful pain

Choreographed steps in graceful lines
Weaving between life
Fantasy
And real lies

Spinning on Blackness
Movement that pushes and pulls
Twist the energy
In and out of shape
Her dance
Her form
Her grace
Turns to whispers
And harsh glares

Yet…

Chosen was she
Dancing center
Solo Lonely Independent
His vision and her grace
A performance
Debut Ballet Spectacle
Certainly a show
The sight to see

Floods coming in
Spots of light
For actions
To the affirmative
Corrected acceptances
Retributive postulates
Her dance sings that story
Of coloring spaces
Where darky wades dangerous water
To spin and leap as graceful
As she

Making pretty points
Where none can be made
Hal Preposterous thoughts
Black woman in control of her space
They mad

Thumbing backs and drops to the floor
He tries to loosely control
Shine lights on
Her beauty
His vision
Of breaking free
On and Off
Left and right
…The stage

As mystery and doubt crowd the scene
She lets down her hair
Long
Dark
And kinky hair

Skin of chocolates and islands
Centerstage
Dance his vision
Paintings to life
Life of paintings
She dances in the light

Beautiful scenes
And flights of life

OUR MISSION

THE BLACK IRIS PROJECT’S mission is threefold: create original ballets and arts education curriculums that directly address and celebrate diversity; provide a performance platform for Black artists to collaborate and share their personal stories with their respective communities; and provide ballet training to the Black community as a means of developing structure, focus and discipline through teamwork.

OUR VISION

By harnessing the Black community’s inherent creative spirit, THE BLACK IRIS PROJECT will encourage and inspire youth of color to pursue art, movement and music as an expressive outlet and means for collective healing, as well as educating audiences about how Black history relates to the modern Black journey.
