Join us for an evening of story-telling with WMHT – share your Vietnam stories as Part One of a two-part program documenting this national story with your photos and memories. Record your story and be part of a permanent archive as part of the new Ken Burns/Lynn Novick documentary, The Vietnam War, which will be premiered locally on September 17 here at RCHS as Part Two of this program. The evening is also the kick-off for Wartime Stories: The World War I and Vietnam Experience, a new exhibit opening at RCHS on September 11, 2017. The public is invited to share their stories and images of people involved in these conflicts as part of the museum's year-long look back 100 and 50 years ago to document what was the war and the home front experience of Rensselaer County residents. The biographical panels which will be produced for this exhibit and the information gathered will become part of the permanent collections here, available for research. Free & open to the public 5-8pm.
