This dramatic story follows the lives of a large family of 12 who joined the Watervliet Shaker community in the autumn of 1824. The Wicks family had Rensselaer County connections. Their story reveals much about the Shaker world, but also provides a bigger picture of how ordinary people lived during the middle of the 19th century. Ann Sayers, a long-time docent at the Albany Shaker site, spent over five years researching the Wicks family. The result is a lively, readable, action-filled drama.
