We love the images that come out of events set up at one long outdoor table. Strung with lights, these spaces capture the magic of sharing food with friends and family. With the strong local food scene here, and the tradition of potluck events, we imagine a permanent set up like this would get a lot of use.

The strip of park that runs from downtown to the riverfront between Chase Bank and its drive-thru seems like an ideal location for something like this. It would be within close proximity of downtown restaurants and would activate a missing link to the river. A narrow strip, it is hard to imagine anything else working in that location, and it has access to power sources for those patio lights or for plug-ins to support outdoor co-working. Like the idea? Put a proposal together and send it to us at info@createportagecounty.org.
