Communities are incorporating creativity into general infrastructure investments that cost money regardless. This spending can have more impact when seen as an opportunity to strengthen community identity. Bike infrastructure, in racks and hitches especially, can add character if approached as mini sculptures throughout a community.

CREATE sees a missed opportunity locally in the lack of visible celebration of our Trivia Town bona fides. A standard bike hitch -- in the shape of question marks or that integrate trivia questions or team names -- would be an easy way to spread this identity across the community. If you like this or a different idea, put a proposal together and send it to us at info@createportagecounty.org.
