

High Impact Leadership: How Leaders Improve Achievement, Enhance Creativity, and Redefine Accountability for 21st Century Schools

Presented by Dr. Douglas Reeves

Brief Description: In this interactive presentation, Dr. Douglas Reeves provides participants with the latest research on the specific leadership actions that have the greatest impact on student achievement. With a combination of case studies, quantitative analyses, meta-analyses, and syntheses of research studies, participants will consider how to resolve conflicting research claims and how to apply research findings in schools and districts. In addition, participants will receive practical tools for gaining greater focus on high impact strategies so that students, teachers, and administrators have the time necessary for successful implementation. “With the demise of the No Child Left Behind Act,” Dr. Reeves suggests, “school leaders have a historic opportunity to redefine educational accountability to include not only academic results, but also creativity, critical thinking, community service, communication, and a variety of other indications of success that are uniquely important to each school.” This presentation offers opportunities for real-time interaction with the presenter through the use of texts, Tweets, e-mails, and face-to-face conversations. Every participant is eligible for a full year of one-to-one support and follow-up so that the knowledge and skills acquired during this presentation can have a lasting impact on the schools and districts of each participant.
