

Improving Learning: Existence Proofs for Accelerating Achievement for All Students

Presented by John Van Pelt

Brief Description: Overview of Moving Your Numbers, a technical assistance and dissemination initiative of the National Center on Educational Outcomes (NCEO). NCEO defines common effective practices used by five districts to intentionally redefine leadership as a collaborative learning process involving all adults across the district, align and focus all work related to instruction and achievement across the district as part of a continuous improvement process, and use of multiple sources of data at all levels of the school system to support instructional decision-making and higher learning for all students and student groups (e.g., students with disabilities).
