HDR Remodeling & Inspired Independence Hosted An Evening Inside A Newly Built Accessory Dwelling Unit (ADU)

Berkeley, CA (October XX, 2017) - HDR Remodeling along with Jane Baldwin, owner, and Carrie Shores, Inspired Independence, hosted an evening affair, Inside an ADU, on Thursday, October 12, from 5:30 pm to 8:00 pm at Baldwin's newly built accessory dwelling unit (ADU) in Oakland.

The ADU, commonly known as a "granny-flat" or "backyard cottage," was recently featured on CNBC. The evening affair hosted members of the community who are advocates for building ADUs in the Bay Area.

HDR Remodeling is one such community member and a Design + Build firm focused on educating the public on city ordinances and regulations for building ADUs. The Berkeley contractor is working to make information on building accessory dwelling units as accessible as possible and holds Lunch & Learn events at their Design Studio on Building Backyard Cottages. For a full schedule of their seminars and events, visit www.hdrremodeling.com.

Baldwin's 400 square foot ADU includes all the amenities of a standard house, including a galley kitchen, living room, bedroom, bathroom, and laundry. HDR Remodeling and Inspired Independence completed the ADU after months of designing, planning, and construction. They held an evening affair, Inside an ADU, to give community members a glimpse at the property and an idea of how ADUs are helping the Bay Area community live sustainably.
