Amy Weaver's history speaks to an inherent love of design. Interested in drawing, painting and an array of other creative pursuits as a child, Weaver went to college for textiles and marketing. "After college, I entered a retail training program," she says. "Then, in 1992, I was asked to participate in a decorator's showcase after a well-known designer saw my home." Weaver has been involved in the world of residential design ever since, going on 25 years. Speaking to what she most loves about her field, Weaver points to the opportunity to travel, the interesting people she meets and learning something new on a daily basis. Driven to make each client happy and guided by her motto, "Your home should be your sanctuary and reflect your personality, not mine," Weaver advises homeowners to be specific about their intentions. "When you hire someone whose work you love, be specific about how it makes you feel," she says. "Is it the color, texture or the way they understand scale?"

The bones of this beautiful Victorian home are fantastic. The furniture, selected by Weaver and her team, accentuates the contrast to the ornate built-ins through restrained lines, quiet color palettes and subtle textures.

“The use of color and layering is important in making a home feel alive.”

Milestones in your firm's success?

We are refurbishing the Marin Cancer Care center and creating a new, fresh and exciting space for its patients. Giving back to the community is a highlight for our firm.

One thing your clients would be shocked to know about you?

In second grade, I was a Girl Scouts Brownie. When we went to the leader's house, I wanted to redesign it.

Dream creative project?

A beautiful pied-à-terre in Sonoma County, Napa Valley or Italy.

What are your design pet peeves? Why?

A room without personal effects. Books, photos, art—these all tell a story regarding the personality of the homeowner.

Favorite store to shop? Where is it, and why is it your favorite?

Artefact Design & Salvage in Sonoma. It carries both outdoor and indoor ideas from all over the world. I would really recommend it to anyone wanting a pop of surprise in their home.
