Strengthening the Links of the Coffee Value Chain
Join PGE for a unique origin workshop to inspire new perspectives on Gender Equity
Nicaragua, February 27 – 28, 2018

The CQI Partnership for Gender Equity (PGE) believes that transformative impact on gender equity starts with collaboration at key three levels of the coffee value chain: farming households, producer organizations and the end-market.

PGE’s field level projects motivate real change in perceptions about gender equity and inspire action that yield positive impacts on coffee farming women, youth, their families, communities and the industry as a whole.

Meet us this February in Nicaragua to experience this unique program in person.

Through your participation, you will:
➔ Hear from male and female farmers how household methodologies have contributed to new ways of working within their families and communities
➔ Gain valuable insights into key aspects of gender equity and inequity that impact the well-being of households and communities and what can be done
➔ Identify, discuss and corroborate the linkages among the three levels of the value chain, and the roles that participants can play to accelerate gender equity
➔ Understand how investing in gender equity improves value chain outcomes and impacts your business
➔ Be a thought leader in motivating real change in the global coffee sector

The Details:
What? Origin workshop, 1.5 days
Where? El Paz del Tuma, Jinotega, Nicaragua
When? February 27 – 28, 2018
Who? Coffee buyers, roasters, influencers and advocates

Join Us!

PGE works hard to unlock the potential of coffee farming women, youth and their families, promote equitable opportunities for their communities to thrive, and catalyze bold industry action toward a supply chain that works for everyone.

Request details by sending an email to: connect@genderincoffee.org

This workshop is held in collaboration with: And with funding support from:

!Soppexcca
!PRODECOOP
!SDI
!Safe
!UTZ