- Options for people who want to reduce their use of pharmaceutical medications
- Integrative support for patients having surgery
- Family history review and preventive strategies
- Innovative laboratory testing
- Bio-identical hormone balancing

★ To prepare for your consultation, please follow these guidelines:

Mark Immel, ND, DHANP
Naturopathic Physician

Dr. Mark Immel graduated from the National College of Naturopathic Medicine in 1982. He has been in private practice since that time. Dr. Immel is licensed by the Oregon Board of Naturopathic Medicine.

Known to most patients as "Dr. Mark", he provides personalized and effective treatment plans to help patients restore and optimize health. With over thirty years experience in naturopathic medicine, he offers several areas of expertise.

Homeopathic medicine remains at the heart of Dr. Mark's medical practice. This approach treats the whole person, using powerful, yet safe natural medicines. He continues ongoing post-doctorate study of homeopathic medicine with an international group of experts.

Dr. Mark counsels patients on diet and the safe, effective use of nutritional medicines. Supplements are an important part of health care in the twenty-first century. Vitamins, minerals, and other nutrients do more than merely correct deficiencies; they are essential to support our body's defense against stress, pollution and chronic disease.

In addition, Dr. Mark provides expert advice on the concurrent use of supplements and medications. With today's mass marketing campaigns from both pharmaceutical and supplement companies, it is more important than ever to screen for possible interactions and nutrient depletions.

Dr. Mark Immel is a member of the Oregon Association of Naturopathic Physicians.
