Zoological gardens

The Copenhagen Zoo was founded in 1859 and is situated in a park area a few kilometers from central Copenhagen. It has been expanded several times, and these days it comprises a large area on both sides of an important road in and out of Copenhagen, under which there is a tunnel for Zoo's visitors.

From the 1980's focus has been on animal welfare and a wish to present the animals to the public in more realistic environments. An important contribution to that goal was the construction of the new elephant house, opened in 2008. The picture shows the old elephant house, though, and compares the size of an elephant to that of a dinosaur.
