Jura

Cool climate wine region in France, just in between Burgundy and the border of Switzerland. They make unique wines that are incredibly food friendly. The Reds (Poulsard, Pinot Noir, Trousseau) are usually drunk before the Whites, as they are usually lighter and lower in alcohol. The main white varieties, Savagnin and Chardonnay are often made in the same process as Sherry, where they are aged under a layer of flor, which gives it a slightly oxidative style to the wine. Jura wines are very refreshing with high acidity and the Whites pair wonderfully with chicken and seafood.

France

Gamay: the younger brother of Pinot Noir, comes from regions such as Beaujolais, Loire, and L'arDèche. It has similar characteristics to Pinot Noir but is a little lighter and usually made to drink in its youth. Its very fresh, approachable and versatile. Pairs well with duck, pork belly and chicken.

Cinsault: Is a medium bodied red wine, that originates from the Languedoc-Roussillon region in France, but is also grown in the Châteauneuf-du-Pape region. It is great with spicy Asian food as it is low in tannin, with floral, strawberry and red cherry characteristics.

Carignan: Is a medium bodied red wine that is grown predominantly in the Languedoc-Roussillon region in France. Carignan was once considered a low quality wine grape, but has since been reinvigorated by quality producers using old vineyards to make food friendly, rich, fruit driven wines. Quality Carignan will show red berry fruit, licorice, smoked meats and baking spices. It goes well with both white and red meat, pumpkin, mushroom and will hold its own against a curry.

Japan

Koshu: is a Japanese grape variety, stylistically somewhere between a Chablis and Pinot Gris. Characteristics of white peach, citrus, minerality, high acidity and very clean. Pairs well with sashimi, squid, smoked/ cured fish, and duck.

Bordeaux

Chateau Martet: This is 100% Merlot, from the left bank of Bordeaux. Yes, you did read that correctly! Left Bank Bordeaux is always Cabernet Sauvignon driven and may contain some Merlot and other Bordeaux grape varieties, while the Right Bank is Merlot and Cabernet Franc dominant. This is the only left bank Bordeaux that is 100% Merlot. Merlot can be a bit hit and miss in Australia but Merlot from Bordeaux can be truly amazing. Flavours of blackberry, prunes, plums, truffle, earthy, rich, balanced, and a full bodied wine. A layered, complex Merlot. Definitely worth a try!

Italy

Grillo: is a white grape variety that is native to Sicily. Its a light white wine with nutty, fruit driven generally apple and lemon characteristics, and nice crisp acidity. Fantastic match with white fish, prawns, chicken and nuts.

Austria

Austrian wines although not as well known in Australia, make great red and white wine that pairs wonderfully with Australian and Asian food.

Grüner Veltliner: is the main white variety from Austria. It's a dry wine, that is an exotic alternative to Sauvignon Blanc. It falls somewhere between a Chardonnay and a Riesling, usually having citrus and stone fruit flavours, hints of white pepper, nuttiness, slightly herbaceous, and great acidity to match. This wine is great with fried chicken, crustaceans, pork belly, and vegetable dishes.

Zweigelt: is a hybrid of the Austrian grapes St.Laurent and Blaufränkisch. It's usually lower in alcohol, around 13.5% and according to some winemakers, no matter how long the grapes are hung on the vines the grapes won't concentrate further. Zweigelt is lighter in style with a real cherry and raspberry profile. It sits somewhere between a Pinot Noir and Grenache and pairs well with with chicken, duck, pork, and sausages.
