Consultation

The first part of the booking process consists of a consultation with me, preferably 3 weeks prior to shoot date. Weddings are an exception. Several consultations will take place over a few months prior to wedding date (At least 1 month prior). I prefer face-to-face, but some circumstances (such as out-of-state/county shoots) will require an over-the-phone consult.

Your consultation is a chance to know who you are. It also gives me a chance to ask questions and show you samples of work that are similar to your ideas. It will consist of fully detailing the shoot and going over the contract so you get the chance to illustrate your story just how you want it. That way, we have no surprises and the shoot can run smoothly. We will talk location, dress, and schedule the date of the shoot.

Preparation

There are ways you can prepare yourself for a successful photography session! For example, it's best to get a full night's sleep before our shoot. For families, sleepovers or late night hangouts are not ideal for your children. The day of the shoot is meant to be relaxing and fun for all involved. I will always do my best to be prepared, but you must be too! This will be discussed during our consultation.

The Session

When you come to the session, relaxation is key! The best shots come naturally and are unforced. Don't worry about "perfect" poses or pristine smiles; just be yourself! Sessions have a flexible time limit, so please breathe deep and let the stress melt away with each click of the camera. I try to schedule sessions during Golden Hour (an hour or two before sunset) but there is flexibility and we can discuss exact times during our consultation.

Photo Review

This is a time for us to review the session and select your photos! Usually this takes place about a week or two after your shoot (After the honeymoon for Weddings). We will meet in person to go over the shots and you can select which ones you want to keep. I will be there to offer my advice if needed. Once the selected shots are edited, I will provide you a gallery via Google Drive or Dropbox. Every gallery has 40+ hours of careful attention, post-processing, and editing for color correction, lighting, and clarity. Print packages are available upon request.
