THE CITY GLOWS BELOW

1. By day, it's a picture-perfect colonial street. By night, whispers linger between the balconies. Locals say you can sometimes feel unseen company as you walk its cobblestones. Go slowly and listen.

2. On All Saints' night, families gather here with food, music, and flowers to welcome their loved ones' souls back. It's not spooky it's beautiful, full of light and emotion. Visit with respect and you'll witness one of the most meaningful nights in the city.

3. This huge green space feels like a hidden world after dark. Locals tell stories of wandering souls and forest protectors. It's peaceful, but it has a presence best visited with a guide or group.

4. As the night deepens, Sopocachi fills with live music, small bars, and conversations that stretch for hours. Myths meet modern life here Supay, the underworld trickster, is said to wander between the shadows and dance floors.

5. A quiet, romantic spot overlooking the valley. At night, the lights of the city feel almost alive. It's a perfect place to end your night walk, watching La Paz sparkle beneath you.
