HEALTH TIP – Beware of Button Batteries

They are found everywhere in our homes—in games and toys, TV remotes, watches, hearing aids, flashlights, key fobs etc. As you know, curious children put everything in their mouths. The biggest danger in swallowing these button batteries isn't from choking; it's the damage to the child's respiratory and digestive systems. When a button battery is swallowed, the saliva triggers an electrical current, creating an intense chemical reaction that cause severe damage in as little as two hours. Once the process begins, the damage can continue even after the battery is removed. More info at www.healthychildren.org or www.safekids.org.
