Kurmasana
Tortoise Pose

- Sit on the floor with the legs slightly bent in front, drawing the feet towards the trunk.
- Exhale bend the trunk forward and insert the hands one by one under the knees.
- Turn the wrists and the palms face up, and move the arms back from the shoulders and stretch them straight so the forearm near the hips joints.
- Gradually intensify the stretch until the chin and the chest rest on the floor. Extend the legs fully and press the heels down to the floor hold this position 30-60 seconds.

- In this pose the limbs are withdrawn and the body resembles a tortoise. The mind becomes calm and composed and develops equanimity whether in sorrow or in joy. This Asana prepares the aspirant for the fifth stage of yogic practice namely Pratyahara (withdrawal of the sense from outside objects)
  - Light on Yoga: pages 288-292

- In Light on the Yoga Sutras, BKS Iyengar translates and comments upon the two sutras about Pratyahara (sense withdrawal).
  Sutra II, 54 – “Withdrawing the senses, mind and consciousness from contact with external objects, and then drawing them inwards towards the seer, is pratyahara.”
  (p. 159)
  Sutra II, 55 — “Pratyahara results in the absolute control of the sense organs.”
  (p. 162)
