Dear Friends,

As we ushered in our second decade at Seattle JazzED, we focused on the excitement of a reimagined post-pandemic world. Because of you, Seattle JazzED is a stronger organization today. Our teachers and staff showcased their creativity and entrepreneurial spirit the last few years, as they continued to pivot in harmony with our ever-changing environment. This spirit is key to our culture and it’s what keeps me inspired to serve on the Board.

This past year, we expanded our geographic reach to provide access to more students with the acquisition of Seattle Music Partners. We also redesigned our board nomination and selection processes to support our growth. With excitement, we are fortunate to welcome four new board members!

Recently, I received the most affirming message about the work that we do. I recently learned of a new JazzED family and their joy for their son who loves jazz and plays multiple instruments. He is “over the moon excited” about his new JazzED community, a respite from the bullying he experiences at school.

Looking ahead, excitement is abuzz as we prepare for the ground breaking on our future home, JazzHouse. I invite you to stay on the journey with us and bring others along. We look forward to another successful year with your unwavering trust and support.

Onward,

Arlene Sargeant
Seattle JazzED Board President
“We moved from Atlanta, GA a couple years ago. We love music, and we love jazz, but in Seattle we felt disconnected and so we did some searching on the internet and found Seattle JazzED.

About two months later, my daughter [Angie] started in Foundations. It was very challenging, but we loved the program, and my daughter is very committed. She’s amazing with her discipline and she embraced it.

When we found JazzED, we found paradise. I love the vision to make this resource affordable to the community. We did all the summer camps; we didn’t miss one. On the first day, we didn’t know what to expect, but on the second day, it felt like ‘okay this is my home’.

After COVID, being isolated in homes was hard for her [Angie] and when JazzED started, it was like ‘finally I get to get out of the house and connect with other humans and other girls.’ This past week one of the girls from the camp came and spent the whole afternoon. This community here is so important.
“I really value removing barriers to music education. As a teacher, I've had opportunities to experiment and try new things, which has been so valuable. I think in 2015 or 2016, D'Vonne Lewis, who's a highly regarded drummer and bandleader in Seattle, recommended me to come teach a rhythm masterclass to high school kids.

That was my first time in the JazzED classroom. Since then, I've taught jazz combos, ensembles, classes for toddlers, general music at elementary schools, online lessons, protest music, assemblies...a lot of stuff.

Since I'm a professional musician out in the world, I appreciate the chance to come into the classroom and lead through jazz, a Black American art form, and teach through an antiracist lens in the best way we can.

Since there is such a shared belief in jazz music education here, I feel like all of the people who work here are my friends. I've also worked here long enough to see the students that I started teaching when they were little, go on to be professional musicians in Seattle or go to school for it and still have that passion, which is amazing. Every once in a while, I have people come up to me and go, ‘You taught me how to walk my first bass line!’ So... RAD.”
We strive to partner with other community members that also recognize the whole-child approach and who can help us create nurturing pre-school and after-school environments.

That is why JazzED has been instrumental in fostering this vision. They’ve brought in their socially conscious Ukulele program to our elementary youth at our historically Black-identified Madrona location and filled our 4-classroom pre-school at Miller Annex with song, laughs and motor-skill building. Both curriculums were series-based music programs that invite and engage learners into a hands-on experience.

We look forward to continuing this connection as we guide children out of the pandemic and re-introduce them into enrichment spaces that complement our educational and social emotional programming.”
JazzED exposes jazz music to youth who often do not allow themselves to dream of playing an instrument, let alone being part of a band. Seattle JazzED intentionally invites and supports students from all backgrounds, creating a space where people of various backgrounds, lifestyles and life experiences have an opportunity to work together to create something greater than themselves. It just happens to be achieved through the creation of awesome jazz music!

Cooperation, collaboration, risk taking, responsibility, accountability and perseverance are some of the life-skills JazzED students develop and practice as band mates and as human beings navigating their worlds. I look forward to seeing the amazing things in store as Seattle JazzED begins their second decade. This important work will continue to receive my support.

"The instructors, students, and families were all in it together."

I say "WE" joined because the concept of JazzED's vision and mission, to provide excellent jazz music education to all youth who want it, required a "WE". This was a game changer, a recognition of the need for a leveling field of sorts. The instructors, students, and families were all in it together.

After forcing Malcolm to dress up for the audition, tie and all (which I later found was totally unnecessary~ sorry Mal!), he was placed in Mr. Bob Knatt's (pictured, right) band and stayed involved throughout most of his high school years and for a few performances after graduating. Listening to the beautiful music these young musicians created was exciting, inspiring.

“We moved to the Seattle area from the east coast in 2008 with our 6th grader, who had already been playing the trumpet for about three years. We joined Seattle JazzED in 2010, their first year.

Dear Friends,

At JazzED, we think of jazz not just as a genre of music, but as a call to action. When we are grappling with the most challenging aspects of our work and of our world, our Education Director Kelly often asks, “What does jazz call us to do?” This question immediately aligns us with what matters most in jazz – bravery, collaboration, inclusion – and we always find our way forward.

One of the most profound impacts of letting jazz lead the way is the big beautiful community that has grown up out of the seed that was JazzED 13 years ago. Our students and their families, our music educators, our community partners and our supporters, now thousands of people strong, have heeded the call of jazz to center generosity and joy and a deep sense of caring for one another.

To see this community in action fills us with hope at JazzED, the power of so many people coming together to ensure that our young people have what they need to create beautiful lives for themselves. We are grateful to all of you for showing up and for joining in, and we hope you will continue alongside us!

With gratitude,
Laurie de Koch, Executive Director
