

Want to take a course at another seniors centre?

Your NESA membership allows you to take instructional courses at a variety of Edmonton seniors centres for the same price as their members pay.

What you need to know about reciprocal program registration:

- Reciprocal registration applies to instructional courses only. However, some centres will accept reciprocal registration for social events, non-instructional programming and clubs. Check with the centre you want to register with.
- You must show a valid membership card from one of the participating centres in order to register.
- Participating centres have different registration procedures, so contact the centre to find out what you need to know to register.
