

Manzanita Sunset

I wanted to capture you bind you in pixels on the miniature screen to recall your calmness in times of chaos

I hurried to the ocean's lip to snare you before you slipped away into the dark

I didn't notice dogs had ceased chasing sand-laden toys & gulls silenced squawking out their incessant needs

My dead phone jarred me into reverence of the moment

I saw with clear eyes inhaled salt air, relished it on my lips & soothed by gentle waves lullabying the shore gained clarity in your cloudless sky connected to my own fire as your red silhouette faded into the next realm behind me the full moon smiled

© anne richardson 2016

