Glenn Rudderow

Artist

Having the desire to create since such a young age, Glenn Rudderow grew up on the marshes of the Cumberland County Bayshore of New Jersey. Landscapes have since occupied his consistent inspiration for art. Rudderow studied art at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Art and then eventually became a teacher there. He likes to take in the “light, air and composition of the land” when painting different locations. Glenn is nationally recognized for his work and was even filmed for “Reflections of a Bayshore Artist: Glenn Rudderow”, which has been shown across the U.S. Rudderow has been a part of many exhibitions including some at WheatonArts.

This piece here, at the Seaview Gallery is a permanent collection of the Noyes Museum of Art and is not for sale.
