

The food, wine and service of Mizuna has always found its center of gravity in the traditions of France. And that makes sense to us; for many chefs, sommeliers and servers, training begins with the classics of France.

Whether it is Duck a l'Orange, the Grands Crus of Burgundy or fileting Dover Sole table-side, France has been and will likely always be the standard for many. As you read through the list, each section will start with the classic wines from within France made from the grape or grapes on which the section focuses. At the end of each section, you will find wines from other areas of the world inspired by these standards. We are proud and happy to be a place to showcase the craft and artistry involved in marrying food and wine with service and ambiance to create lasting memories and deep feelings. Whether you find yourself reading this list on your birthday or anniversary, on a Tuesday or a Saturday, here with a long-time friend or new acquaintance, we are honored to serve you, excited to guide you and glad that you have chosen to spend an evening with us.

RIESLING, GEWÜRTZ, VIOGNIER AND THE WHITE PINOTS

Traditionally, Riesling and its other Noble Alsatian friends are bottled in tall, narrow glass; commonly referred to as “flutes”. They might better be called megaphones, for these varietals (Riesling in particular) shout of their origins and purity at the top of their lungs. Plant Riesling on slate in Germany or limestone in Australia, plant Pinot Gris on alluvial soil in Oregon or schist in Austria, they will tell their tale clearly and concisely from start to finish: master storytellers, who never break from the plot and never lose your attention. Few wines are as worthy as these when it comes to attention from wine drinkers. All of these (especially Riesling) can be dry (as most of those represented on our list are) or can be fruity. The nose can be dominated by crushed rocks and petrol or by peaches, white flowers and spice. What remains constant is balancing acidity and flavor purity. Don’t be fooled by lifelong prejudices against Riesling or Muscat or Gewürtz: they are not all sweet and certainly not just for your great aunt’s Bridge partners. These are often wines of truly aristocratic pedigree. And they offer unprecedented intensity and complexity across the spectrum. As a result, they’re dynamite with a vast array of food.

SAUVIGNON & CHENIN BLANC

Sauvignon Blanc has found a home in the hearts of the world's wine drinkers. And while many feel it easily-understood and quickly identified, the reality is that Sauvignon is quite the chameleon. True, it grows in a wide range of climates and places across the world, but the secret is its versatility. Only Riesling can rival it in terms of flexibility with regards to style. Chenin Blanc is likewise a remarkable grape. It can be found in some of the same places as Sauvignon, most notably the Loire Valley. Its interpretations are widely varied as well; terse and tense in Savennieres, ripe and fruity in Vouvray and apple-driven and steely in certain parts of the New World. And of course both can also withstand extended ripening and produce exotic dessert wines sought after the world over. They are important grapes as exciting as any other in the world.

CHARDONNAY

The Gold Standard, from Burgundy's Golden Slope

It is not hard to love Chardonnay. But it is hard to learn to leave it alone. Among the white varietals, Chardonnay is perhaps the easiest to manipulate. It is also one of the most expressive of its origin. The challenge of making beautiful Chardonnay comes in knowing when thoughtful improvement ends and noisome meddling begins. For when oak, butterscotch and vanilla become the dominant tones, the harmony of earthiness and acidity are quickly overpowered. Nowhere is this balancing act more skillfully executed than in Chablis, and the string of villages running from Dijon to Lyon that make up Burgundy. From this mesmerizingly complex swath of land comes such a variety of interpretations of Chardonnay that a whole lifetime won't yield enough days to learn them all.

CHARDONNAYS OF THE "NEW" WORLD

All over the world, producing Chardonnay has been seen as a rite of passage in new wine regions. Almost any wine producer with ambitions to belong to the great international club of wine grown-ups has to prove that he or she can make a Chardonnay, preferably a Chardonnay fermented and matured in new(ish) oak barrels the Burgundian way, with the best of them. The fact is that most of this sort of wine is far more a product made in the cellar than in the vineyard. Or, to put it another way, skilfully-made barrel-fermented Chardonnays tend to taste very much the same wherever they are made. Indeed when many people say they like the taste of Chardonnay, what they often mean is that they like the taste of oak, or at least the qualities of oak maturation.

CHABLIS- FRANÇOIS RAVENEAU

Domaine François Raveneau was founded in 1948 in the wake of the second World War, when Chablis was not a place for distinctive wines to be found. Although the family had owned vineyards and grown grapes for years, Monsieur Raveneau made a point of selling off the family's finest parcels during the run-up to the war. This may have been a hedge against the potential lean times he worried they might encounter as the shadow of war crept across Europe. What is certain, however, is that with the union of François and his wife (a Dauvissat), the great vines added to their domaine insured that over the ensuing six decades, the family would come to be known as stoic, fanatical, quality-driven vigneron. Painfully small amounts are made each year (a great vintage will yield 3,000 cases, barely enough to satisfy the demands of France's Michelin-starred restaurants) and every bottle allocated to the United States is bitterly fought over. Over the years, Mizuna has managed to collect a lovely array of Raveneau wines and we are pleased to offer them now, as the time has never been better to enjoy great Chablis.

ITALIAN AND IBERIAN WHITES

What at first may seem an arbitrary grouping, the “Italian and Iberian” section of our wine list reflects southern Europe’s place in the history of wine production and global proliferation. Referred to as enotria, or “Land of Wine”, Italy was the progenitor to commercially viable wine production in Europe in ancient times.

Richly diverse in both grape varieties and winemaking styles, this perfectly positioned peninsula was remarkably well suited to kickstart the trade of Western civilizations first true commodity; wine. Along the most trafficked trade route west was the Iberian peninsula – modern day Portugal and Spain -, shrouded in its own traditions of winemaking and distillation. Below you will find wonderful and exotic representations from this historically integral piece of the winemaking world.

OTHER EXCEPTIONAL, EXOTIC AND ADVENTUROUS WHITES

While France is the focus of this wine list, the simple fact is that there are many wonderful wines made from grape varieties not encountered in France. There are also wines in France that are not easily categorized.

Here is where they are found. Whether from Greece, Austria or elsewhere, this is a page for people with exploration on their mind and a palate curious as to what else the world has to offer from grapes they may have never heard of until now.

BURGUNDY

THE ARGUMENT FOR TRADITION

There is something deeply comforting in the knowledge that there exists in the world of wine a place where label design, consulting winemakers and the international press have very little influence; where great wine springs from the confluence of tradition, pedigree and study. This is Burgundy. Seemingly purpose-built for enjoyment with food, Burgundy has never been more relevant or exciting in the world of wine. And though severely fragmented in terms of ownership and geographic boundaries, composed of a dazzling array of soils and microclimates, and maddeningly difficult to understand in one go, the Pinot Noir of Burgundy provide for wine drinkers a study in all that is great and worthy in the world of wine.

DOMAINE DE LA ROMANÉE-CONTI

PINOT NOIR'S "NE PLUS ULTRA"

The world of red Burgundy is mystifying, provocative and sexy. It is filled with walled vineyards, hallowed sites and storied domaines passed down from generation to generation, in some cases for more than 500 years. Nowhere is this story of pedigree and heritage more pronounced than in the wines of the Domaine de la Romanee-Conti. Established in 1869 and under the same ownership since then, the DRC tends only to Grand Cru vineyards, wholly owns two of the greatest Grand Crus in Burgundy (La Tache and Romanee-Conti) and produces wines of astounding grace and complexity. We are pleased and proud to represent a blinding collection of these singular and indulgent wines.

SYRAH - GRENACHE - RHONE FAMILY

Sun-drenched and delicious, the wines of the Rhône Valley, whether from the roasted slopes of the North or the gently rolling hills of the South, are wines of immense pleasure. Syrah makes a variety of wines with incarnations as diverse as the soils on which they are planted; the taciturn-while-youthful Côte Rotie, its wild and untamed cousin Cornas or the thoroughbred of the stable, Hermitage. And while Grenache may find its origins in Spain, for most wine drinkers it will always be at its best in Châteauneuf-du-Pape and Gigondas. And of course there are the intense, delicious examples of Syrah, Grenache and their bedfellows that are found throughout the New World. Whether cool-climate Australian examples or broad and dense Paso Robles bottlings, these sunny wines bring hedonism and intellectualism together under the same cork.

BORDEAUX

There is a reason that Bordeaux found a place in the hearts of collectors the world over from its first days of production. These earthy, dry and densely-packed wines possess the ability to age for immensely long periods of time, are exceptionally intense and concentrated in their youth and able to reach heights of nuance and sex appeal that is rivaled by almost no other red wines. Along the "Left Bank" of the Gironde river on France's Atlantic coast, Cabernet Sauvignon, Merlot, Cabernet Franc, Petit Verdot and Malbec grow in idyllic conditions in communes like Pauillac, St-Julien and Margaux. The appellations referred to as the "Right Bank" are the Merlot-driven wines of Pomerol and St-Emilion. While the region is most known for the wines of the famed Classification of 1855, there is much to explore outside of the Left Bank's Medoc district. These pages provide the opportunity to explore both the famous chateaux and the less-known domaines.

CABERNET FRANC

In its not so "classic" forms...

We have a thing for Cabernet Franc. While it is certainly worth conceding that some of its representations are, well, "esoteric", this misunderstood grape is truly capable of greatness. This little subsection is a byproduct of our passion for Franc and for the winemaking processes that allow for its most expressive and exalting flavor profiles. These wines are plush, structurally sound, approachable in their youth and built to appease a great many drinkers.

VEGA-SICILIA

Vega Sicilia has long been considered Spain's "First Growth" and most prestigious wine estate. Located in the famed Ribera del Duero, Vega-Sicilia was founded in 1864, popularized in the early twentieth century and anchored in the illustrious history of one of Spain's truest growing regions. Among the wines produced, the Valbuena 5° is described as an "ambitious" endeavor and a "synthesis of all things original and traditional".

Each of the below listed wines are aged for 5 years in both French and American oak, and produced with "extraordinary care for its life rhythms and cycles". Each of the vintages offers a distinctly styled wine. Some are rich, powerful and exalting while others are seductive, polished and restrained. In either case, they are an exercise in both precision and indulgence.

THE ITALIANS ARE COMING...

After years of excluding Italian wines from the Mizuna wine list we have gradually started to fold them back into our repertoire. Italy has a very unique wine style and as wide an array of cultures and subcultures as exists anywhere in the winemaking world. Just as Italian food is bold and satisfying, so too are her wines and we hope that the mere perusal of the labels below will evoke the emotions associated with the Italians' passion for the good things in life.

OTHER CLASSIC, EXOTIC AND NOVEL REDS

The wines in this category defy easy definitions. That does not mean they are any less important to the wine program or less well-suited to the food. These are wines that are frequently born of winemakers "taking the road-less-travelled" in the eponymous words of Frost. Whether produced from ancient or near-extinct varietals, grown in far-flung and dark corners of distant continents, these are wines we often forget. From the savory-tinged Tempranillo of Spain's Ribera del Duero and Rioja districts to the nearly-endless pleasures of great Zinfandel, scour this section for wines of adventure and exploration.
