Great Wolf packs up Tulare County project

National waterpark resort chain says it will not build at Caldwell and Hwy 99 to focus on existing sites already under construction elsewhere and invest in existing resorts

Reggie Ellis Publisher

The Sun-Gazette

A national waterpark resort is pulling out of Tulare County, taking millions in tax dollars and thousands of jobs with them.

In a Feb. 24 email, Great Wolf Lodge released a statement to The Sun-Gazette saying the company had reached "mutually agreeable" terms to terminate its deal with the Sequoia Gateway at Caldwell Avenue and Highway 99. Great Wolf was planning to build a 525room hotel and indoor waterpark on 35 acres of the highway commercial center. The resort complex would have also included restaurants, a meeting space, spas, and a family activity center.

Jason Lasecki, corporate communications director for Great Wolf, said the company's decision to pull out of the project in Tulare County was to focus on other sites already under construction.

"As we look to expand the Great Wolf Lodge experience to more families, our current priorities are to continue investing in our existing resorts, successfully open the resorts currently under construction and pursue growth in areas most under-served by Great Wolf Lodge," Lasecki said in the Tulare County Economic Development Director Mike Washam said the timing of Great Wolf's decision had more to do with an opportunity for the developer to sell the land to someone else. Washam said there is another developer interested in purchasing the entire 35 acres so the project could end on good terms for all involved.

Washam went on to say Great Wolf already had five parks under construction and had concerns about the cost of construction materials, high interest rates and a labor shortage. He said the company did not say if the project would still be viable if it had moved faster through the design and plan-

"I think potentially it could have gotten done a little quicker and potentially would have been under construction by now and it would have been one of the ones that got through, while maybe one of the other parks would not at this time," Washam said. "But I can't confirm that."

The last major preconstruction item was to finalize a sewer agreement between Great Wolf, the developer and the City of Visalia. Unfortunately, some of the company's other projects were progressing faster through the preconstruction process and the agreement was not complete by the time another offer was made on the land.

"We are extremely appreciative of both Tulare County and the City of Visalia for their partnership throughout this exploration process," Lasecki said.

Visalia Mayor Brian Poochigian said the city was disappointed by Great Wolf's decision not to locate in Visalia but that they appreciated the cooperative effort between the company, county and city throughout

Financial markets shaken by bank failure

Trish Arnold Financial Advisor LPL Financial

Financial markets were shaken as Silicon Valley Bank (SVB), the California bank subsidiary of SVB Financial Group (SIVB), fell into FDIC receivership. SVB is the first FDIC-insured institution to fail since 2020 and the largest by assets since Washington Mutual failed in 2008. Prior to the latest distress, the bank held more than $200 billion in assets. SVB's failure was then followed by another, crypto-focused Signature Bank. The news, not surprisingly, caused market participants to speculate if there will be another shoe to drop. For some, these developments have brought back painful memories of the financial crisis 15 years ago.

Before explaining what happened, let's start with the most recent headlines. In March we got word that the U.S. government would step in to prevent contagion by offering SVB customers access to their uninsured deposits. And by designating SVB as a systemic risk to the banking system, the Federal Reserve (Fed) and U.S. Treasury Department are able to use emergency lending authority to help prevent runs on other banks (by making it easier to borrow against depreciating securities without suffering the balance sheet damage SVB experienced). The top priority in this situation was to prevent runs on other banks, particularly the many small and mid-sized banks not under the watchful eye of the Fed and not subject to sophisticated stress tests.

Now to the 2008 comparison. Back then, the problem was far-reaching credit riskjunky mortgages on virtually every financial institution's balance sheet (and the balance sheets of many non-financial institutions). Credit risk is not the problem this time, it is interest rate risk. Rising interest rates caused the value of the bonds on SVB's balance sheet to lose value. Once those securities were marked to market, as is prescribed by accounting

PRESIDENT'S CORNER

Wait, am I the only one?

Gail Zurek President and CEO Visalia Chamber

This question reaches the Visalia Chamber in several different forms. Sometimes business leaders call to ask if other businesses are having challenges with hiring or reinvestment questions or a host of other issues and con-The question cerns.

also pops up when working with public agencies. Finding the intersection between public and private, we often serve as a translator helping both sides find common ground. Businesses calling to ask these questions are asking for resources, help, reassurance, and solutions. As your Chamber, we understand these calls very differently.

As a collective, these calls from businesses represent trends, concerns, and issues facing our business community. These calls show the things business leaders need help with, things businesses need to be successful, and questions they can not quickly answer. Some of our most significant work advocating for local business has grown from these calls. From developing a microbrew district to having Tulare County included in Covid relief dollars to developing a youth entrepreneurship program, these calls have driven our work in making Visalia a vibrant community full of successful businesses.

So, what have the calls been about lately? What are the needs and concerns of our business community? Several more interesting calls surround safety, security, and the partnership between law enforcement and local business. What is the role of local businesses in securing their business property, employees, and customers? When should they engage with the police on these matters? What are issues that should be prosecuted? What is the value of prosecution to the business, community, and in a broader perspective? These calls often begin with "I've heard" or "a neighboring business told me," but all point to, at best, misinformation and, at worse, a disconnect on how a partnership with law enforcement ought to would work.

When I received several calls from various businesses, I first asked other businesses if they were experiencing similar issues. When I found that this issue seemed to stretch beyond one business or type of business, I reached out to law enforcement leaders. In my experience, these leaders want businesses to succeed. They are supportive of finding solutions to allow all businesses to thrive. There is a disconnect between what businesses are hearing and experiencing and what our law enforcement offer as resources and support. Perhaps a misunderstanding that needs a conver-

This is the value of the Visalia Chamber. As a convener, we bring people together to discuss and define these issues, address fundamental concerns, and allow everyone to move toward solutions. To that end, we will be hosting The Business of Law and Order this May. A City of Visalia and Tulare County law enforcement panel will share resources and eliminate misunderstandings. Perhaps more significant than that, they want to engage in dialog about how to best support your business within the confines of the law and justice system.

Say 'yes'

Have you ever watched the TV show, "Say Yes to the Dress", on TLC where eager brides are searching for the perfect wedding dress for their big day? They visit the famous bridal boutique, Kleinfeld Bridal, in New York City with big hopes and lots of excitement at stake. They may even have a set budget in mind before saying "yes" to the wedding dress of their dreams.

Similarly, businesses or organizations that want training for their employees may also shop around before saying "yes" to a curriculum or a group that can provide the employee training they desire. Proper employee training is vital for any employee, and it goes without saying that most employees could use the support as they learn to navigate their new workplace environment, take on new skills for their job, and improve on their skills or weaknesses. But not all organizations have an employee training program established that can help take their employees to the next level.

Although many companies have their own "in-house" training tailored for their employees, many companies do not have a set training program. Consequently, they will often have to seek out consulting or training services for help. But just like shopping for a wedding dress, it's not a surprise when the employer forks out a large sum of money into the training services for their employees. Or in the worst-case scenario, if the training is too expensive and out of the budget, employers will have to dismiss the desire for training until the company's budget can allow for it. However, here in Tulare County, one organization has been providing workforce training at a reduced or no cost to the employer thanks to their training reimbursement program.

The College of the Sequoias (COS) Training Resource Center has been of service to many local businesses around the Tulare and Kings counties and has provided various types of workforce trainings, in response to employer demand. To help local businesses, the COS Training Resource Center utilizes its contract with the Employment Training Panel (ETP) to offset employer's training costs. In the end, it's money for businesses to use to upskills their workforce, improve employees' abilities and increase employee retention.

ETP is entirely funded by the Employment Training Tax paid by California employers. The program is performance-based, providing reimbursement to em-

BANK OF AMERICA

B of A buys 100 boxes of cookies from excited Girl Scouts in Visalia

Girl Scout cookie sales in Visalia have been a bit slower than usual this year, so the girls of Troop 7015 were especially thrilled when a Bank of America vice president strolled up to the cookie table in front of the Save Mart on West Goshen Avenue last Saturday, asked them how sales were going, and then announced that she was going to buy 100 boxes.

It's the fourth year in a row that Bank of America has bought a big order of cookies from a lucky troop in the Fresno/Visalia area. Veronica Lopez, the bank's business banking senior relationship manager who announced the big purchase, said the bank supports the program for several reasons.

"Besides the fact that the Girl Scouts is an incredible organization with fantastic cookies, we're also supporting financial literacy from a very young age," Lopez said. "By selling cookies each spring, the girls learn a lot about sales, marketing, finance, budgeting and planning - many of the same financial education skills the bank offers free to res-

ports our patients who may be in need of home device (heaters, fans, electric wheel chair batteries, food, clothing items, etc) to make them more comfortable and our Foundation may also offer referred and existing patients financial support who may not otherwise have the financial or insurance means to retain hospice care/ services.

The interesting thing about providing hospice care is that everyday and every patient is different. We have the privilege of serving comfort care to a range of patients who are ethnically, culturally, religiously, politically, financially who live various level of care home and skilled nursing facility settings that are all different. All our patients are fighting or surrendering to a terminal illness and our compassionate and competent medical teams provide quality care to ensure they have a dignified transition from this physical life to whatever belief system they have to their next. Understanding and honoring each individual end of life path is not only interesting but a privilege.

American Care Hospice has a very proud position when it comes to honoring our Veterans both off and on hospice services. Part of We Honor the Veterans partner program is to achieve levels. Our company is progressive and available to ofter our community and local non-hospice Veterans breakfast, lunch, and early dinners around the Central Valley as we offer and provide Veterans Centric Education and information about hospice and Veteran benefits and services.

We also have a special Military Veteran to Veteran Volunteer service program to honor and strengthen our local community Veterans while assisting and caring for our hospice Veterans. When a local Veteran can provide a 1:1 with our hospice Veteran, there is something very honorable about that exchange while visiting with one Veteran to another for emotional, military, and supportive end of life care ser-

The Book Nook celebrates local teen author with First Friday Spotlight

Fifteen-year-old Visalia native was featured guest reader at art hop

When the First Friday Art Walk returned to Downtown Visalia on March 3rd, local art lovers found a truly unique experience at the heart of The Book Nook on Main Street. 15-year-old local author, Donya Hassanshahi, was featured as the guest reader, as she shared selections of poetry from her first published book.

Hassanshahi, a sophomore at Redwood High School, started writing her poetry during her COVID-19 quarantine in September 2020. Over a span of nearly 2 1/2 years, Hassanshahi's one-time exercise in expressing her feelings ultimately led to her writing more than 100 poems, all centered around her growth from adolescence into young adulthood during a global pandemic. As she entered her sophomore year at Redwood, Hassanshahi fine-tuned her col-

"People my age don't get many opportunities to share themselves like this," said Hassanshahi. "I'd love to inspire other young adults my age, but I also hope adults can see that teenagers have a different view from what they typically expect. I hope someone who finds my book feels inspired, and says Well, if a 15-year-old can write and edit a book on her own, why can't I?""

Hassanshahi's book, Fairy Without Wings is available at The Book Nook, which officially opened its doors in October 2022. Owned and operated as a division of Family Health-Care Network, The Book Nook serves as the newest addition to FHCN's literacy initiative with the goal of increasing literacy rates through Visalia and the surrounding communities.

"Donya is an exceptional example of the stories we love to see throughout the San Joaquin Valley: someone who is fearlessly pursuing her dreams," said Kerry Hydash, President & CEO of Family HealthCare Network. "We are so excited to celebrate Donya's story at The Book Nook on Friday, as part of our continued commitment to the children of the communities we serve."

Quality of Life – Day Session

Rik McNeil

The Leadership Visalia group for 2022-2023 gathered for a day session addressing the Quality of Life on March 10, 2023. The group was hosted at the Workforce Investment Board on Main Street in Downtown Visalia, where they enjoyed breakfast while preparing for an exciting day.

After orientation, the first session began. CEO and R.N. Darren Peterson of American Care Hospice addressed the group to discuss maintaining quality in the final season of life through hospice care. Darren was joined by his wife Diana Peterson, Hospice Liaison and R.N., and Community Outreach Director Sharon Crook-Allison, a Leadership Visalia alumni. After beginning a career in law enforcement, Darren was drawn to nursing, completing his education and obtaining his R.N. license. He didn't expect to enjoy hospice work, but quickly found satisfaction in helping his patients navigate a difficult time while maintaining dignity and a degree of control over their last stages of life. While working in hospice care, he watched many companies be swallowed up by larger corporations and became concerned over the quality of care provided. He decided to start American Hospice Care to provide the level of care that he believed all hospice patients are entitled to. Darren believes that maintaining quality of life for a patient rests on the care team and their responsibility to develop a plan of care directed by that patient. The team at American Care Hospice includes Registered Nurses, Physician Assistants, Social Workers, Licensed Practical Nurses, Home Health Aids, and others who work toward a plan of care that addresses the patient's changing needs as they shift focus from a cure to experiencing the end of life with respect, comfort, and dignity. During the session with Darren, some members of the group related their own experiences with hospice care, both good and bad. Through discussion, it became apparent that consulting hospice care earlier in the process will directly affect the quality-of-life experience for the patient and their loved ones. American Care Hospice was recognized award in 2022. This year, Darren's team received recognition as a Level 2 hospice care provider, and for their We Honor the Veterans program. American Care Hospice co-ordinates a volunteer program for community members who can visit or run errands for patients while they settle

Tosha Pequeno joined the group for the next discussion. Tosha has been with Valley Strong Credit Union for over 18 years, beginning with the High School Branch program at Ridgeview High in Kern County in 2004. Tosha relocated to Visalia in 2020 to help lead the opening of Valley Strong branches in Tulare and Kings County, and immediately focused on outreach and developing strong roots within the community. In her dialogue with the group, Tosha discussed the importance of financial health as a quality-of-life issue, beginning with financial literacy to establish an early and comprehensive relationship with personal finances. Valley Strong offers financial courses, credit education, budgeting assistance, and a gamified mobile app to help develop financial skills and knowledge. Additionally, Valley Strong offers free informational workshops on a variety of important financial topics, including budgeting, financial emergencies, mortgages, and identity theft. In the time since Tosha relocated, she's become a valued member of the community, working closely with Visalia Rawhide, the International Agri-center, and is a board member for the Visalia Chamber of Commerce. In addition to her discussion of financial quality-of-life, Tosha outlined some of the benefits of community involvement Visalia, siting the collaborative nature of the people, and the willingness to welcome new partnerships and ideas. After a short break, the Leadership Visalia group took a short rainy walk to Oak Street Studios Fitness, where Michelle Miller and Melissa Hulsey introduced Leadership Visalia to another issue in quality-of-life: maintaining health, mobility, and fitness. Michelle related her journey to opening the studio, and the satisfaction she gets through working with clients in Pilates. Melissa shared that her journey with Pilates began when she sought relief from back pain over 10 years ago. A career in marketing dictated many hours at a desk, and she experienced pain daily. Through Pilates, she was introduced to the reformer and learned to strengthen her core, alleviating the pain and immediately improving her overall health and quality of life. The class then divided into two groups, with one group learning to work with the spring-controlled reformer for a full-body workout to promote strength, flexibility, and balance. The other half of the class adjourned to the adjoining studio to participate in a TRX workout, challenging the body's core in every exercise to develop balance and core strength. After 15 minutes, the groups switched machines and rooms so that each could experience the other workout.

After an invigorating half-hour session, the two groups convened again, and walked several blocks to the Visit Visalia visitor center on Main Street. In the center, Tourism Marketing Director Suzanne Bianco discussed the purpose and mission of the Convention & Visitors Bureau in bringing meetings, conventions, and visitors to Visalia through incentives, presentations, and marketing of the venues, hotels, and facilities available for visitors. Tourism is a major economic driver in the region, contributing to our local businesses, and bringing valuable revenue to the area to drive quality-of-life. Recently Visalia was designated the first-ever Certified Autism Destination in the country by the International Board of Credentialing and Continuing Education Standards. Local tourism partners have made a focused effort to address the needs of autistic travelers and their families. A recent study showed that 87% of parents with an autistic child do not travel. The new designation and recognition allow travelers to access the knowledge and assistance to enjoy accessible travel to Visalia and the nearby national parks.

The group then walked the short few blocks back to the Workforce Investment Board, and enjoyed a tasty lunch provided by Visalia Eatery, and sponsored by Valley Strong Credit Union. During lunch, Leadership Visalia discussed progress and strategy for the community project for the 2022-2023 class, a mural to call attention to a promote mental health in the youth in our area.

After lunch, the next session began, with Stephanie Young J.D., who provides paralegal services in the South Valley. Stephanie introduced Visalia attorney Michael Brown to the discussion, allowing the group to focus on quality-of-life through estate and medical planning, and how each can vastly affect live-changing events. The examples given made a strong case for maintaining control over how one's estate and property is handled in the event of death or incapacitation. Statistics shared in the discussion made it clear that many people don't plan for these events, and the effect on what they wish to leave behind for their heirs is startling.

The day session on quality-of-life was unfortunately interrupted by a real-life development, as our valley was experiencing higher-than-normal rainfall and flooding potential. The facilitator and several community leaders in the group were notified of a possible impending flood danger and made the decision to cut the day short for the safety of those involved.

Visalia Unified unveils 'What's New?' for the 2023-2024 school year

We are excited to share some of the incredible opportunities that will be available for Visalia in Unified School District (VUSD) students during the 2023-2024 school year. Our teams have been diligently implementing this year's objectives while developing new opportunities to enhance student learning. VUSD's focus for this upcoming school year is strengthening the foundation for learning and advancing academic opportunities for all stu-

Advanced Learning Opportunities – VUSD will begin to plan and build opportunities for elementary students to engage in above grade-level experiences that extend their learning. High school students will have access to additional college course options (Dual Enrollment) and guaranteed college admission opportunities through increased partnerships with local and national universities. VUSD will increase access to academic honor programs (i.e., Beta Club, National Honor Society, etc.) for our middle and high school students.

- Visual and Performing Arts in Grades K-12 With the passage of Proposition 28, VUSD will expand the current Visual and Performing Arts (VAPA) curriculum, including providing weekly art and music to students in transitional kindergar-
- ten through 3rd grade. Aligned Scheduling in Elementary Schools – All elementary schools will have the same start and end times for all students.
- Investment in Math 1 and Phonics - Every student in grades kindergarten through 2nd grade will receive phonics instruction from a Board adopted phonics curriculum. This provides our primary students with a strong foundation to prepare them to read by third grade. Additionally, Math 1 in middle school will receive high school credit to allow students to access higher level math courses in high school and help meet or exceed math requirements necessary for a post-secondary educeive an additional $1.5 million per year in property, sales and other taxes, totaling $22.5 million over the same 15-year timeframe. In all, the county expected Great Wolf to generate more than $8 million in tax revenue per year. That's far more than the estimated $238,000 the county will provide the property in services, such as public safety. EPS said Great Wolf would have had a total economic impact from both direct and indirect sources of $1.7 billion in Tulare County.

Great Wolf would also have been a major job creator. EPS estimated construction of the 35-acre resort would have generated about 1,000 jobs. Once open, the hotel and waterpark would have employed an estimated 660 people or more, as the actual number of rooms could be as high as 700.

Visalia Chamber CEO Gail Zurek called the loss of millions in sales tax dollars and hundreds of jobs "heartbreaking" and said local officials should look at this as an opportunity to evaluate how it will handle future projects of this magnitude.

"While it is easy to blame the economy or state policies, we need to look hard at what worked and what didn't so we can be successful next time," Zurek said. "This evaluation process is critical in understanding the most effective ways to meet the needs of businesses."

Washam said Great Wolf's decision to terminate this project at this time does not shut the door on a possible return to the area for another waterpark resort in the future. SoCalGas to give $10 million to support low-income families, seniors and small restaurant owners impacted by unprecedented regional gas market prices

Thousands newly eligible for winter bill assistance after SoCalGas bolsters United Way's Gas Assistance Fund with historic $5 million contribution

Chris Gilbride

Office of Media and Public Information

Southern California Gas Co. (SoCalGas) today announced $10 million in shareholder funding to help customers with bill assistance and to bolster community resources for those who may be struggling financially.

The company committed $5 million in shareholder funding to the Gas Assistance Fund, a program administered by the United Way that provides income-qualified customers with one-time grants to help pay their natural gas bills. The contribution is the largest in the fund's 40-year history and will help the United Way expand access to the program to thousands of additional Southern Californians this winter.

SoCalGas also announced it will contribute $4 million from its donor advised fund to relaunch its popular Fueling Our Communities program, a collaboration with local food banks and nonprofits that has provided free meals and groceries to thousands of Californians facing food insecurity since 2020.

In addition, SoCalGas will contribute $1 million in aid from its donor advised fund to small restaurant owners through the Restaurants Care Resilience Fund, a fund that was started in 2021 to help small restaurants with improvements, upgrades, employee retention and to manage debt, losses and rising costs. "This winter's unprecedented natural gas prices, on top of already high inflation, have been a real hardship for many Southern Californians, especially our most vulnerable, our seniors, and people facing difficult circumstances," said SoCalGas CEO, Scott Drury. "Thanks to the incredible work of the United Way, and the network of tireless, nonprofit leaders who support our work in the community, we will be able to help many more of our neighbors, families, and small businesses in cities and towns across Southern California this winter."

"These contributions will provide much-needed relief for some of our most vulnerable residents at a time when cold temperatures make it harder to turn down the heat," said Los Angeles County Supervisor Kathryn Barger. "As we learn more about the West Coast market conditions that led to unusually high bills, proactive partnerships like this one are addressing the immediate very real needs of our community. I continue looking forward to what soon may be a return to more normal natural gas prices."

Expanded access to gas assistance fund

SoCalGas's latest contribution to the Gas Assistance Fund will help the United Way expand income eligibility for the program and increase the grant amount available to each qualified customer from $100 to up to $400 for the remainder of the 2023 program. Additionally, income-eligible older adults (55+) and those facing certain financial hardships may be eligible for extra grant funding.

"Over the last four decades, the Gas Assistance Fund has helped hundreds of thousands of vulnerable Californians who face difficult choices during cold months between staying warm and other basic necessities like food and medicine," said Elise Buik, president & CEO at United Way of Greater Los Angeles. "This historic contribution will help the United Way dramatically expand our reach and allow thousands of individuals, older adults, and families across our region to remain healthy and housed this winter."

Fueling our communities in 2023

The Fueling our Communities Program began in 2020 as a collaboration between SoCalGas and five regional nonprofits to provide free meals to individuals impacted by the COVID-19 pandemic. During the program's first summer, SoCalGas and its partners provided more than 140,000 meals to 40,000 individuals from underserved communities across Southern California. With its latest $4 million contribution, SoCalGas aims to significantly expand the Fueling our Communities program via new and existing partnerships with food banks and nonprofits with a focus on serving families and seniors in need.

Supporting small businesses

The Restaurants Care Resilience Fund was started in 2021 to help small restaurants with improvements, upgrades, employee retention and to manage debt, losses and rising costs. SoCalGas has supported the fund since its inception.

"What started as a lifeline to restaurants during the pandemic has grown into a robust fund to assist small restaurants with grants to strengthen their businesses and invest in their people," said Alycia Harshfield, executive director of the California Restaurant Foundation. "SoCalGas' incredible generosity, commitment, and leadership has a lasting positive ripple effect, and we are proud to partner with them again to make such a meaningful impact."

Market conditions improve

After a significant drop in February from January's unprecedented natural gas commodity prices, market prices for March 2023 usage are currently forecasted to be significantly lower than February's

A Sempra Energy utility

Consistent with regulatory requirements, SoCalGas will file March core procurement prices (rates) with the California Public Utilities Commission (CPUC) at the end of February.

The core procurement rate reflects the price SoCalGas pays for natural gas for residential and business customers. That rate changes each month. SoCalGas does not set the price for natural gas. Instead, natural gas prices are determined by national and regional markets. SoCalGas buys natural gas in those markets on behalf of residential and small business customers, and the cost of buying that gas is billed to those customers with no markup.

What caused prices to spike in January?

According to the US Energy Information Administration (EIA), a number of factors have contributed to higher natural gas commodity prices:

- Widespread, below-normal temperatures on much of the West Coast, including Washington and Oregon;
- High natural gas demand for heating by customers in areas with below normal temperatures;
- Reduced natural gas supplies to the West Coast from Canada and the Rocky Mountains;
- Reduced interstate pipeline capacity to the West Coast because of pipeline maintenance activities in West Texas (the out of state pipeline mentioned earlier in this news release);
- Low natural gas storage levels on the West Coast.

According to the EIA, the U.S. set a natural gas consumption daily record on Dec. 23, 2022, further exacerbating supply and demand

Several experts discussed these market conditions at a California Public Utilities Commission public hearing earlier this month.

Is additional help available?

In light of unprecedented market conditions, the California Public Utilities Commission voted earlier this month to accelerate the California Climate Credit. As a result, SoCalGas customers will receive a credit of $50.77 in their February or March bill, depending on their billing cycle.

In addition, SoCalGas continues to encourage customers to take advantage of programs and services that can help manage usage

Eligible customers may sign up for a Level Pay Plan (LPP), for example, which averages their annual natural gas use and costs over 12 months. There are also financial assistance programs for eligible customers who are experiencing hardships.

SoCalGas' free Ways to Save tool may also help customers with energy savings options through a personalized savings plan that offers a household energy analysis, customized energy-efficiency recommendations, bill comparisons, and energy usage comparisons that could help save on natural gas bills. Customers can also sign up for weekly Bill Tracker Alerts to monitor natural gas consumption, take steps to reduce usage, and avoid bill surprises.

Customers can visit socalgas.com/ManageHigherBills for more information on the factors that lead to higher bills and ways we

Sam Ramirez Revel Events Co.

Local venue operator, Sam Ramirez, Founder of Revel Events Co, part of The Naxon Group, says they will begin managing events of the former Lamp Liter Inn Convention Space this month. A new operator has acquired the Inn portion of the property, leaving the convention space, bar, and resultant with no operator. This resulted in the convention space cancelling several social events as well as local business and service organizations regular meetings. When property owners, the Hyde Family, realized the challenge this presented to clients of the former Lamp Liter they contacted Revel Events to help ensure the successful execution of all promised events. "Although we're still exploring more permanent plans our goal now is to ensure that all the families and service clubs who've committed to this space continue to have the option to host their events," said Ramirez. Revel Events has begun to contact former clients and encourage anyone who was previously booked and had their event canceled to reach out to them for new options. "When we realized the situation that was created, we knew we had to do what we could to assist the clients who'd made plans and we're glad to be working with Sam and his team to continue seeing those through," said Bri-

Ramirez says in the coming months they'll begin exploring options to continue serving the community with the bar and bring back some unique options for the diner. "This property has a rich history in Visalia and we're looking forward to engaging the community invite them to share how they believe we can help return the spaces to their former prominence," said Ramirez. "We're proud to be able to steward it through this transition".

With other local venues in Revel Event's portfolio including, Bello Vita, the Woodlands, Watermill Grove and The Mason, Revel Events is positioned to assist clients with other arrangements as well.

Cal Water contributes to seven Visalia organizations

California Water Service Group donates roughly $51,500 to seven local organizations in Visalia to help better the lives of residents

Lacey Patrick Reporter The Sun-Gazette

Local community organizations were given a total of $51,500 in donations from CalWater in order to make the lives of residents better in the city of Visalia.

On Feb. 22, the California Water Service Group (Group) announced it would be donating $1.57 million to community organizations, first responders and students in 2022. Among the recipients of these donations are seven local organizations in Visalia, including the Visalia Emergency Aid Council who received $11,000 in funding from the Group. This is part of the Group's commitment to enhancing the quality of life for those it serves. The utility and its employees gave another $34,270 through an employee charitable donation-matching program.

"We are dedicated to making our communities a better place to live and work, and to supporting organizations that make a meaningful difference for those in our service areas," the Group's CEO Martin A. Kropelnicki said in a statement.

The local organizations who received funding from the donations are: Visalia Emergency Aid Council, $11,000; Lions Club, $8,000; Children's Museum of the Sequoias, $5,000; Downtown Visalians, $10,000; United Way of Tulare County, $5,000; Valley Oak SPCA, $5,000; and Kaweah Delta Hospital Foundation, $7,500.

Director of communications Yvonne Kingman said that the VEAC received funding for their winter hunger relief program this year. The Children's Museum funding will go towards constructing their new "wonderful water" exhibit, meanwhile Kaweah Delta's funding will go towards their modernization campaign. The other organizations will be using the funding for their general uses and purpose.

"Knowing, also, that our employees are the backbone of our presence in these communities, through our matching program, we support the causes close to our team members' hearts and augment their efforts to help their communities thrive," Kropel-

Last year, the Group allocated 27% of its community giving efforts specifically to support at-risk, underserve, and disadvantaged communities. An additional 20% went to community improvement efforts across the utility's service areas, 17% for educational grants, and 14% to support firefighters, police officers and first responders. The remainder of the donations assisted various initiatives, such as support for veterans, animal welfare and healthcare.

The other recipients of the donation funding include Garden Pathways, Salinas Public Recreation Unlimited, Maui Food Bank, Valencia Shelter for Victims of Domestic Violence and Gig Harbor Peninsula Fish Food Bank. According to the Group's press release, all recipients share in their commitment to helping people

Through its employee charitable donation-matching program, Group matches up to $250 per employee per calendar year. All contributions are part of the Group's philanthropic giving program and do not affect customers' rates.

rules, SVB was no longer capitalized as well as it needed to be, prompting the FDIC to place the bank in receivership

But that wasn't the whole story. SVB's niche customer base was another big problem. Its emphasis on early-stage venture capital customers meant its deposit base was more concentrated and less sticky. Many of those start-up companies burned through a lot of cash recently, while funding options such as initial public offerings dried up.

One other unique element of this story is SVB's mismanagement of its balance sheet. Its heavy exposure to interest rate sensitive Treasury and other government securities, with insufficient interest rate hedging activities, left the bank particularly vulnerable to a run. Once the bank was known to be facing solvency issues, word traveled fast through the venture capital community and the deposits fled as fast as these entrepreneurs could log into their online accounts. With the federal backstop now in place and few, if any, other large banks facing similar interest rate risk, any further spillover should be limited. One potential silver lining is the Fed will likely slow its rate hiking campaign until confidence in banks is restored. So what should investors do? Some caution is warranted as sentiment around the banking system remains fragile. But we believe tactical investors should maintain multi-asset allocations at or near benchmark levels. And don't lose sight of opportunities to potentially add risk after the SVB distress passes. Conditions will improve before long, in our view. For longer-term, strategic investors with well-balanced allocations, we would not make any changes at this point.

In closing, SIVB's niche clientele and its balance sheet mismanagement were distinctive contributors of the bank's downfall. Meanwhile, the government's actions to backstop deposits and provide short-term funding to banks that need it, greatly reduce the odds of a systemic crisis. We may see a bit more market volatility than we would like to see in the short term, but this is not another

Ace is the place for new jobs By John Lindt

Visalia is now officially the place for Ace.

The new 1.1 million-square foot Ace Hardware logistics center on Plaza Drive held a grand opening on March 2 with Mayor Brian Poochigian cutting the ribbon. "We are really excited to have Ace invest in our community providing good jobs to the residents of Visalia," Poochigian said.

Ace Hardware Corporation, the world's largest hardware cooperative with 3,600 affiliate retailers, announced plans in August 2021 to open a new Retail Support Center in Visalia, Calif. The new facility has been under construction for 16 months and will employ more than 400 people in the area. It will also augment the company's Rocklin, Calif.

(Greater Sacramento Area) and Prescott Valley, Ariz. distribution centers and will be centrally located in California, between Sacramento and Los Angeles.

The company was brought to Visalia by Arizona-based developer Seefried Industries. They are leasing the building to Ace. Seefried is developing two more spec projects in Visalia including a 553,500 square foot facility next door to the new Ace complex. They also have a contract to develop a huge, 280-acre industrial park north of Riggin Street and just west of Shirk Av-

bles causing building closures and company layoffs, Kaweah Health was able to open a much needed mental health facility for the community.

On March 8, Kaweah Health opened their Center for Mental Wellness in Visalia. This extension of care is part of its continued commitment to meet the demands for mental health services in the Central Valley. The center will provide outpatient therapy and counseling for people of all ages. The 1,200-square-foot center will be open from 7:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Saturday and is located at 301 W. Noble Ave., Visalia. The need for mental health care in the county has been around for some time, and only grew for many throughout the pandemic.

"Due to the limited number of mental health providers, we know how difficult it can be to get in to see a therapist. We're here to help," Theresa Croushore, Kaweah Health's director of behavioral health service line said.

The Center for Mental Wellness is just one of the many projects Kaweah Health is working on to meet demands for mental health services in the Central Valley. A total of five professionals will be working as a team to help serve the community. They will offer patients services in individual therapy, family therapy, child and adolescent therapy, couples counseling, specialized therapy groups, EMDR therapy, trauma focused cognitive behavioral therapy and play therapy.

The clinic accepts most private insurance, Medicare and self-pay; appointments can be made by calling 559-624-6875. Additional access to mental health services, including Medi-Cal patients, is available through our network of rural health Gabriela Martinez, a licensed marriage and family therapist, serves as lead psychotherapist of the four-therapist team. Martinez graduated with a master's degree in counseling from California State University, Fresno in 2003 and has been working in the field of mental health for the past 20 years. Martinez will be joined by the following psychotherapists: Maria Mendoza, a licensed marriage and family therapist; Analis Lopez Gonzales, an associate clinical social worker; and Vanessa Gutierrez and Julie Andress, who are both associate marriage and family therapists. Together the group provides services for those as a result of major life stresses, trauma, etc.

This is all part of Kaweah's plan to continue to expand their mental health services. According to a press release from Kaweah Health, last year, they were awarded an $8.7 million grant to fund the construction of Tulare County's first mental health hospital for youth. The grant will fully fund construction of a 22-bed wing to Kaweah Health's

Mental Health Hospital. Also last year, Tulare County Health and Human Services Agency (HHSA) and Kaweah Health were jointly awarded a $4.9 million grant from California Health Facilities Financing Authority for the creation of a child and adolescent Crisis Stabilization Unit (CSU). The 12-bed CSU, is expected to open late this summer in Visalia and be open 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. It will provide crisis intervention services for children and youth under age 21.

The COS Training Resource Center recently heard from Eddie at Kawneer, who attended the Supervisory Academy, "I have used many of the techniques we have learned, especially about changes in the workplace and reading personalities. I feel it has made me a more valuable team member and it has opened my eyes to perception."

In addition, from a Better Buys survey, it was discovered that 92% of employees value access to professional development, and companies can have a 34% higher retention rate for employees with this access. Evidently, training is essential for all companies in the current "Great Resignation" age. While keeping your employees and their talents, your employees need to know that you, as an employer, are investing time and money into their professional growth. CITY UPDATE

Help shape the future of Visalia take the public opinion survey

For over 50 years, the City of Visalia has offered an annual survey to its residents in order to evaluate City services and receive opinions from those who live, work and play in Visalia. This year's survey is now available and will remain open to all Visalia residents through March 24.

The 2023 Public Opinion Survey can be completed in English or Spanish online at www.visalia.city/survey or a physical survey form can be picked up and returned at a variety of City of Visalia buildings. In addition, an in-person survey will be conducted to ensure that more citizens are heard.

Every year, The Citizen's Advisory Committee (CAC) conducts the survey with approval from City Council and support from City of Visalia staff. While the foundation of the survey remains unchanged each year to highlight trends and measure comparative data, this year's survey focuses on determining what services are important to Visalians. The vey includes questions that ask respondents to rate various City services and programs ranging from Police and Fire emergency responses to recreational activities and road maintenance.

Respondents have the opportunity to help shape the future of Visalia by offering feedback and even their ideas directly to the City and City Council.

To aid the City's efforts in reaching all Visalians, businesses can place flyers with QR codes directing customers to the online survey at their counters or offices. To request flyers and help maximize response rates, email communityfeedback@visalia.city or call (559) 713-4404.

In addition to the Public Opinion Survey, the Visalia City Council has created another opportunity for citizens to share their feedback or ask questions in a casual one-on-one setting. Council Corner is hosted on the second Monday of each month at City Hall, located at 707 W. Acequia Ave. Walk-ins are available from 5:30 to 6 p.m. and appointments are available from 6 to 6:40 p.m. To schedule an appointment for any 2023 Council Corner, visit bit. lv/councilcorner or call 713-4404.

The Visalia facility features new technology, a climate-controlled environment, and improved automation to help streamline and enhance operations—and importantly includes room to expand.

Ace has recently built or is in the process of building several new facilities around the country as the company continues to grow. Ace's network of distribution facilities, strategically located around the world, serve more than 5,500 retail locations. The new Visalia distribution center will serve more than 300 Ace affiliated stores in multiple states.

The need for more warehouse space was mentioned in the company's third quarter earnings report in November. Ace's wholesale operating expenses increased $24.9 million, or 15.8%, from the third quarter of 2021 partially due to "greater lease expense driven by the expansion of our warehouse space and increased advertising expenses." The hardware cooperative's wholesale operating expenses as a percent of wholesale revenues increased to 9.0 percent in the third quarter of 2022 from 8.6 percent in the third quarter of 2021 as the company reported record third quarter revenues of $2.2 billion, an increase of more than $230 million over 2021. Net income was $100.6 million for the third quarter of 2022, an increase of $1.3 million from the third quarter of
