For big return on investment, choose building updates and amendments wisely

by Dwain Hebda biggest return on investment.

"Curb appeal and location are very imupdate their buildings, it's how to get the tion of if a building owner should regularly To attract new tenants, it's not a ques-property." ing more about the of the property. It's Alley Poyner Macportant," said Mindy interested in learnin and makes them what draws tenants tive tenant will have pression a prospec-"This is the first imchietto Architecture. rior designer with Zauha-Filipi, inte-

Nelson

most impact. pensive, but simply those that create the improvements are often not the most ex-Zauha-Filipi said the most effective windows. Small solutions can have a big in the parking lot, repair broken lights and coat of paint and landscaping, fix potholes "Boost that curb appeal with a fresh trends to meet client expectations. es. Zauha-Filipi advised staying abreast of calling card, so pay attention to those spac-Common areas are also a building's other common areas that distinguish the business owners are looking for ways to building from others," she said. "Most "Tenants expect high-end lobbies and shoes and look at existing and new spaces lords to always put themselves in a tenant's

"It is imperative for owners and land-Mindy Zauha-Filipi, interior designer at Alley Poyner Macchietto Architecture. with a fresh pair of eyes," said Delaney Nelson, director of marketing for White Lotus Group.

ers and clients and that includes being in a space that aligns with how they want to stand out and connect with their custom-before they even move in is a sign of a Anticipating what the client wants landlord who's attuned to their target de-up the space, not just for us, but the other midtown over to a space in the Regency good reminder for us to always look at our tenants in the building as well. It was a area. Even though we owned the building to make some quick changes to freshen we were new tenants and realized we had "Our corporate office just moved from

Berggren

"We realized that the cool 1970's architecture of our shrubs," she said pletely blocked by building was comovergrown trees and "We trimmed those inexpensive changes such as a fresh coat of paint or keeping landscape under control are often the most effective.

spaces as if we were a potential tenant.

Nelson reiterated that simple, relatively dows. These few, don't block the wincomplement the building's lines and ing new ones that up and will be plant-way the space looks." dates completely and positively altered the cost-effective up-systematically. ularly important to approach the project more expense. In these cases, it's particrequires more planning and often entails ing an older building, which generally Exceptions to this rule include refresh-Berggren Architects. requirements of the design program," said structure and compare its assets to the ect to assess the condition of the existing Jerry Berggren, preservation architect with "It is our strategy when starting a projof least resistance.' Ultimately, this is the program. Finally, we determine the 'path "Then, organize the spaces to fit the Continued on page 9.

Continued from page 7.

construction. It's a win-win." it minimizes the amount of demolition. greatest financial benefit to the owner as That in turn minimizes the amount of new regardless of its vintage. its individual positive attributes. Doing so lows the structure's best features to shine, helps direct efforts in such a way that alhave to be able to regard each building on Berggren also said building owners coln's Sky Park Apartments, circa 1964, rewarding." ing, but the more challenging, the more my life. I consider them to be challengbeen working on historic structures all of ered mid-century modern," he said. "I've listed on the National Register. It is consid-"Recently, my firm helped get Lin-