Nine Princesses And a Certain Kingdom

The Story...

Once upon a time in a faraway but not so faraway kingdom, there lived nine princesses. Each had been given a castle by their father and instructed to guard it well – for their father knew there was a thief lurking about who wanted to steal everything he had given to them. Already this mischievous enemy was at work and had stolen the old map of the King’s vast kingdom. His plan was to keep the sister princesses separated from one another so he tore the map into many pieces and scattered them throughout the land.

However, the father of the nine princesses was a great and kind king – one who was majestic and wise, yet playful in all his ways. His one desire was that his daughters would be the most beautiful of all the fairest maidens in the world. He knew that their beauty was not just in their dresses, make-up, or jewelry, but that it was on the inside – the true person of their heart. He saw this beauty like fruit that grew from a tree, and so he tended to his daughters like a gardener tending a fruit tree. And this is where the story begins...
