STATEMENTS OF RESEARCH, TEACHING AND SERVICE INTERESTS:

Research Interests

My research can be separated into two separate but related agendas: (1) the politics of position taking in the U.S. Congress, (2) and campaign spending in US elections. The former consists primarily of work aimed at understanding the causes and consequences of position taking in Congress. It includes work on minorities in Congress, and legislative participation. The second agenda began with a 2010 publication that examines the link between PAC contributions and position taking. From there the agenda expanded to publications examining money and earmarks in Congress and campaign spending of Fortune 500 companies (respectively), as well as a major policy report on cronyism and economic growth in the state of New Mexico. I am currently working on papers dealing with descriptive representation in Congress and the allocation patterns of Super PACs in congressional elections. My work appears in Journal of Politics, Political Research Quarterly, Legislative Studies Quarterly, Social Sciences Quarterly, American Politics Research, Congress and the Presidency and PS: Political Science and Politics.

Teaching Interests:

Thus far I have taught multiple sections of American Presidency (PS 312), American Politics (PS 200), Legislative Process (PS 311), Junior Honors seminar (POLS 495), and American Politics seminars at the graduate level (PS 510, 511) and undergraduate levels (PS 496). Enrollment levels in each of the courses are high, and I receive very strong evaluations from students in all of my classes. In each class I have been placed in the top five percent of both the department and the campus-wide evaluation scores. I am currently a faculty mentor in the Mellon Mays Undergraduate Fellowship Program, serve as faculty advisor to student clubs including UNM Pi Sigma Alpha, the Political Science Honors Society. I continue to facilitate a number of independent studies and honors projects and have been a professor in the Fred Harris Congressional Internship Program since Fall semester of 2006. I have also been nominated for several teaching awards, including Outstanding Teacher of the Year, the Presidential Teaching Fellowship and Outstanding New Teacher of the Year. I received the College of Arts and Sciences' Award for Teaching Excellence in Spring, 2010.

Service Interests:

I currently serve as the department of political science internship coordinator, am a member of the UNM Faculty Senate Athletic Council and was recently elected to the UNM Faculty Senate. I served as director of the Political Science Honors Program from 2011-2016 and graduate advisor from 2014-2017. I am a longtime member of the selection committee for the Fred Harris Congressional Internship Program, serve on the UNM Educator Preparation Council, and was a member of the Truman Scholarship Selection committee from 2010-2017. I serve on multiple graduate committees and continue to review articles for numerous journals including the Journal of Politics, American Political Science Review and American Journal of Political Science. I chair and act as a discussant for panels at professional conferences and am the co-chair of the Legislative Studies division of the American Political Science Association 2018 Annual Meeting.
