Inside

118 → DINING
128 → SHOPPING
134 → SERVICE
140 → NEIGHBORHOOD BESTS
142 → ARTS, ENTERTAINMENT & NIGHTLIFE
148 → WEDDINGS
152 → BEYOND THE CITY

IN THIS TOWN, WE ALL KNOW how easy it is to go from first to worst. Take the Red Sox. (Please.) Point being, it’s tough to get to the top, and even tougher to stay there. That’s why this guide to our ultra-competitive city is such a blast to compile: From French restaurants to personal stylists, from beer bars to kiddie party spots, there’s always a frenzy of contenders. How do we do it? In a word: anonymously. Our staff, plus a veritable army of insiders, reserve tables under spouses’ names, book appointments with untraceable email addresses, and show up at shops unannounced. Then, like true Bostonians, we argue until we have a winner. So dig in, then join the conversation year round at bestofboston.com to enjoy the best that Boston has to offer, every day.
Diners toast the evening with a few pristine bivalves at Select Oyster Bar’s prime windowfront table. See page 202.
DINING

TOP-NOTCH TASTING MENUS, SIZZLING SOUTH AMERICAN, AND A FOOD TRUCK THAT’S ALL ABOUT BACON.

AL FRESCO

Oleanna
184 Hampshire St., Cambridge, 617-494-7804, oleanna@restaurant.com.

Oleanna could serve its lush menu from the back of a pickup truck in a parking lot and the place would still draw crowds. Fortunately, Ana Sortun’s ode to all things Turkish and Mediterranean has a patio oasis, complete with a bubbling fountain, fragrant herb garden, shady fig tree, and heat lamps for chilly summer nights, all lit by strands of overhead lights. During stormy weather, the glassed-in porch makes an equally fine perch.

BAR PROGRAM

Alden & Harlow
49 Brattle St., Cambridge, 617-864-2100, aldenharlow.com.

Chef Michael Scolfo’s first solo outing was an instant success thanks to its vegetable-forward fare and ungodly rich, smoky burger. But Scolfo also deserves a pat on the back for his staffing skills. In particular, bar manager Seth Freidus has assembled a cocktail list that rivals the dinner menu in creativity and ambition, with drinks incorporating vegetables like squash; a house-made amaro on draft; and, come winter, a boozy take on hot chocolate topped with absinthe-and-orange whipped cream.

BARBECUE

Sweet Cheeks
1381 Boylston St., Boston, 617-266-1300, sweetcheeks.com.

Tiffani Faison’s barbecue temple has taken the smoky crown in this town four years running, and justifiably so. Those fusssing over the Helvetica prices should note—her fall-apart ribs, crackly-skinned sausages, and mammoth slabs of brisket are sourced from the highest-quality purveyors. Meat aside, Sweet Cheeks is also the rare barbecue spot that welcomes vegetarian diners with sublime biscuits and one of the finest salads in town—a crunchy mash-up of farro, candied hazelnuts, Brussels sprouts, grapes, and arugula.

ERBALUCE

With its dim lighting, convenient Bay Village locale, and peerless carbonara pasta, Erbaluce has been a destination for occasion Italian dining since it opened in 2008. Perhaps less appreciated, however, is chef Charles Draghi’s separate, weeknight-friendly bar menu, where saucy pork meatballs topped with stripes of herbs, and thick prosciutto-and-fontina paninis pair well with an endless flow of lambrusco by the glass.

READERS’ POLL → BEST PIZZA

1. Regina Pizzeria .................................................. 49%
2. Santarospe’s Pizza .................................................. 31%
3. A4 Pizza .................................................. 12%

For the full list, go to bestofboston.com/results.
Best of Boston: Dining

SOUTH AMERICAN

Orinoco
477 Shawmut Ave., Boston, 617-369-7075;
22 Harvard St., Brookline, 617-278-8005;
50 JFK St., Cambridge, 617-554-0900;
orinocokitchen.com.

Orinoco has churned out irresistible arepas and empanadas for nearly 10 years—the only difference is that now you can enjoy the restaurant’s slow-cooked baby-back ribs with guava barbecue sauce, juicy adobo-criollo chicken with malanga gnocchi, and gut-busting plates of shredded beef, rice, beans, and plantains in three neighborhoods. Whether you’re in Boston, Cambridge, or Brookline, there’s a killer empanada within walking distance.

SOUTHERN

Tupelo
1393 Cambridge St., Cambridge, 617-868-0004; tupeloatwilliams.com.

The reserved atmosphere may be more Cambridge than New Orleans, but Tupelo’s southern flavors are right on. Owners Mike Walker and Renee McLeod serve authentic comfort-food classics like creamy pimiento cheese (the caviar of the South), hearty gumbo, and crunchy fried crawfish tails. The crown jewel? Alligator prepped the way God intended: coated in buttermilk batter, hot sauce, and Cajun spices, and piled on a bed of creamy cheddar grits.

STEAKHOUSE

Boston Chops
1375 Washington St.,
Boston, 617-227-5011;
bostonchops.com.

This venture from Deuxave’s Chris Coombs and Brian Piccini is billed as an “urban steak bistro”—shorthand for “not your grandparents’ steakhouse.” Start with daring small plates like oxtail croquettes with red pepper mostarda, then tuck into an order of steak frites, which combines your favorite cut with a house-made sauce and heaping piles of greens, as well as fries served tableside from large copper bowls.

SUSHI

Café Sushi
1105 Massachusetts Ave., Cambridge, 617-492-0494;
cafesushicambridge.com.

Here, you can have it all: delicate nigiri crafted from local and Japanese seafood; imaginative omakase with treats like raw octopus and monkfish liver torched; and, last but not least, plenty of reasonably priced maki (including a solid spicy tuna). Best of all, you won’t part with a week’s paycheck in the process.

TACOS

Lone Star Taco Bar
479 Cambridge St., Allston, 617-782-8226;
535 Cambridge St., Cambridge; lonestar-boston.com.

The magic here is in the tortillas—hand-pressed in the kitchen to provide a sturdy foundation for toppings like smoky barbacoa and rich Dallas spicy beef. (For an afternoon hangover, there’s the breakfast taco topped with scrambled eggs, cheese, avocado crema, and roasted salsa.) And thanks to a soon-to-open (at press time) location in East Cambridge, you can finally enjoy quality tacos on both sides of the river.