In the battle of Franklin, Tenn., in the civil war, Charles E. St. Clair, now of Oak Grove, Mo., saw one of his comrades, who belonged to Co. H, 6th Missouri volunteers, C. S. A., fall mortally wounded. He noticed a small bible in the dead man's pocket and took it out, and examined it. On a fly leaf was written “Enoch Hood.” Mr. St. Clair carried the bible through the rest of the war, and to his home af-after he was mustered out. He knew Hood, who enlisted at Lone Jack, and thought he might some time find one of his relatives who would like to have the book. He had long since given up any such hope, when a few weeks ago John Hood of Stilp Mils, moved to Oak Grove, and Mr. St. Clair, on becoming acquainted with him learned he was a brother to Enoch Hood. The bible was accordingly given to him.
