company rushed forward, Surgeon Herman Hasse kneeled beside the bleeding Irishman, cut loose the leather straps holding his accoutrements and the string that bound his blanket roll. Spreading out the woolen blanket, he ministered to the wounded sergeant.” — The 24th Wisconsin Infantry in the Civil War: The Biography of a Regiment. By William J.K. Beaudot
