Hiram B Vanneman, Captain, Co. G 84th IN Infantry, U.S.

1810 November 24: Vanneman was born in New Jersey.

1833 January 17: Married Melinda Ayres in Cumberland County, NJ.

1847 April 30: Enlisted in the U.S. Army as a 1st Sergeant. He mustered into service with the 4th OH Infantry on May 19th in Cincinnati, OH.

1848 July 18: Mustered out of the U.S. Army in Cincinnati, OH.

1850 August 5: The U.S. Federal Census enumerated in Lebanon, Warren County, OH showed Hiram, a carriage trimmer, and Melinda living with their three young daughters: Helen, Anna and Julia.

1862 August 16: Enlisted in the U.S. Army in New Castle, Indiana. He mustered into Co. G 84th IN Infantry.
1863-64 A group photo of the 84th Indiana sometime after the summer of 1863.

(The Star Press, Muncie, IN April 14, 1985)

1864 November 30: Fought at the Battle of Franklin.

1865 June 14: Mustered out of the U.S. Army at Camp Harker in TN.

1880 May 13: Applied for a military pension for his Civil War Service.

    June 23: The U.S. Federal Census enumerated in Woodbury, Gloucester County, New Jersey showed Hiram, a painter, living with his wife and daughter.

1882 September 28: The National Tribune, Washington, District of Columbia. H. B. Vanneman wrote a letter to the editor of the National Tribune, describing the Battle of Franklin.
The Battle of Franklin.

To the Editor of the National Tribune:

Your article in last week's number, relative to the battle of Franklin, Tennessee, read with a great deal of interest. In that conflict held on the 16th of November, 1863, I was engaged in the Thirty-fifth Ohio Volunteer Infantry in the Fourth Corps, Army of the Cumberland, commanded by Gen. D. H. Hooker.

The battle was a two days' affair, and the conflict held on the 16th and after for a day and a half was the most severe that our army has met with in the war. The Federal army was divided into two corps, with the right resting upon the Mississippi River, and the left upon the Tennessee River. The enemy was divided into two corps, with the right resting upon the Tennessee River, and the left upon the Mississippi. The battle was fought with great decision, and the enemy was driven back in great confusion and disorder.

I was engaged in the Thirty-fifth Ohio Volunteer Infantry in the Fourth Corps, Army of the Cumberland, commanded by Gen. D. H. Hooker. The action was fought on the 16th of November, 1863. We held our position on the left of the line of battle, with the right resting upon the Mississippi River. The enemy was divided into two corps, with the right resting upon the Tennessee River, and the left upon the Mississippi. The battle was fought with great decision, and the enemy was driven back in great confusion and disorder.

I was engaged in the Thirty-fifth Ohio Volunteer Infantry in the Fourth Corps, Army of the Cumberland, commanded by Gen. D. H. Hooker. The action was fought on the 16th of November, 1863. We held our position on the left of the line of battle, with the right resting upon the Mississippi River. The enemy was divided into two corps, with the right resting upon the Tennessee River, and the left upon the Mississippi. The battle was fought with great decision, and the enemy was driven back in great confusion and disorder.

I was engaged in the Thirty-fifth Ohio Volunteer Infantry in the Fourth Corps, Army of the Cumberland, commanded by Gen. D. H. Hooker. The action was fought on the 16th of November, 1863. We held our position on the left of the line of battle, with the right resting upon the Mississippi River. The enemy was divided into two corps, with the right resting upon the Tennessee River, and the left upon the Mississippi. The battle was fought with great decision, and the enemy was driven back in great confusion and disorder.

I was engaged in the Thirty-fifth Ohio Volunteer Infantry in the Fourth Corps, Army of the Cumberland, commanded by Gen. D. H. Hooker. The action was fought on the 16th of November, 1863. We held our position on the left of the line of battle, with the right resting upon the Mississippi River. The enemy was divided into two corps, with the right resting upon the Tennessee River, and the left upon the Mississippi. The battle was fought with great decision, and the enemy was driven back in great confusion and disorder.
1885 The New Jersey State Census listed Hiram Vanneman living in the second ward of Woodbury, Gloucester County with his wife Malinda and daughter, Helen.

1887 November: Vanneman gave a speech at the third anniversary of the Joseph L. Franklin Camp, No. 9 of the GAR. He was an active member

The U.S. Federal Census Veterans Schedules enumerated in Woodbury, Gloucester County, New Jersey listed Vanneman as a veteran of the Civil War listed in the district.

August 24: The Times, Philadelphia, PA. H.B. Vanneman is listed as being a democrat and on the board of elections.
1898  May 20: Hiram Vanneman died.

Source for photo of Hiram: book "New Castle A Pictorial History" by Darrel Radford

Source for grave photo: findagrave.com